MacDonalds To Remain British Cabinet Members

Premier Baldwin Decides Ex-prime Minister to Continue as President of Council and Malcolm MacDonald to Go From Colonies to Dominions Department Despite Defeat in Recent Election; Will Be Found Seats; A. Duff Cooper, New War Secretary; Thomas, Colonial Secretary

By George Hambleton, Canadian Press Staff Writer
London, Nov. 22.—Prime Minister Stanley Baldwin today reshuffled his cabinet with so few changes that another deal in the near future is freely predicted in political circles.

Rt. Hon. Ramsay MacDonald remains as Lord President of the Council, though rejected by the electors of Seaham, Durham, eight days ago. At the age of thirty-four, his son, Malcolm, is promoted further in the cabinet from Colonial Secretary to be Secretary for the Dominions, though he too was defeated in Basestlaw.

The son and probably the father will be found safe constituencies from which to re-enter the House of Commons.

The only member of the former cabinet to disappear is the Marquess of Londonderry, who was Secretary for Air from 1931 until June of this year, when he became Lord Privy Seal.

NEW WAR SECRETARY
Only newcomer in the new cabinet is Alfred Duff Cooper, who succeeds Viscount Halifax as Secretary for war. He is forty-five, has served in the Grenadier Guards and as Financial Secretary to the War Office, and since last year as Financial Secretary to the Treasury.

Rt. Hon. J. H. Thomas, veteran Secretary for the Dominions, who has held that post for five years, becomes Colonial Secretary in place of Malcolm MacDonald.

W. S. Morrison was appointed to the junior position of financial secretary of the treasury.

While a safe constituency is mentioned for Ramsay MacDonald, his elevation to the House of Lords is still spoken of as a possibility.

The disturbance reached to Great Falls, Bozeman, Butte and Livingston. No damage was reported.

Board Told Canada Needs Oil Refineries

At Inquiry in Ottawa Dr. E. R. Lederer for Imperial Says Gasoline System Must Continue if Dominion Wants to Be Independent

Canadian Press
Ottawa, Nov. 22.—Regulation of crude oil production and refining in the United States is now so effective that no great flood of distress gasoline is likely for a few years, Dr. E. R. Lederer, consulting engineer of Washington, told the Tariff Board of Canada here today.

Dr. Lederer, an expert on the oil industry and formerly chairman of the NRA code committee for the industry in the United States, gave evidence for the Imperial Oil Company at the board's hearing on the gasoline tariff.

Dr. Lederer said that in order to preserve the oil fields in Texas, the output of the wells had to be limited. This had been attempted under state regulations which were not well enforced. The result was that about 150,000 barrels a day of illegal crude oil went into the market. Much of it was stolen and cost the sellers nothing. This was now cut to about 30,000 barrels a day.

REFINERIES NEEDED
If Canada wanted to be independent and secure in its supply of oil and gasoline it needed oil refining facilities even though the crude oil had to be imported, Dr. Lederer said.

He did not believe western Canada could get an adequate supply of gasoline from the western states if Canadian refineries were closed. It could get occasional tank car loads at low prices, but those states had no surplus to spare for export which

CANADA TRADE BAN BY ITALY

But Goods Not Already Under League Sanctions Are Small in Value

Canadian Press
Ottawa, Nov. 22.—Italy has hit back at Canada in retaliation for sanctions imposed against her by the Dominion. It was reported in a cable received today by Hon. W. D. Euler, Minister of Trade and Commerce.

Principal products comprising Canada's exports to Italy are being prohibited entry. Italian newspapers reported, according to a cable from the Canadian trade commissioner at Milan to Mr. Euler.

The advice said reports in Milan were the Italian government was taking action prohibiting entry from Canada of the following products: flour, liquor, aluminum, nickel, agricultural implements, adding machines, iron oxide, tires, rubber bolting, rubber manufactures, casings and photographic films.

POISON MIXED IN WITH SODA

San Francisco Authorities Find Store Employee's Error Caused Three Deaths

Associated Press
San Francisco, Nov. 22.—A full barrel of deadly poison was reported today by Dr. J. C. Geiger, city health director, to have been mixed with baking soda sold at bargain prices to hundreds of San Francisco housewives.

A department store employee's carelessness, Dr. Geiger said, may have been responsible for introduction of the poison into the soda. At least three deaths have been attributed to the poisoned kitchen staple.

The health director said the discovery was made when the store owner turned over to the health department three empty barrels of "baking soda" the store had sold in bulk form during the last month.

Floated Thirteen and Half Miles Above the Earth

U.S. TIGHTENING TRADE EMBARGO IN WAR FIELD

Number of Oil Tankers Cancel Voyages to Italy; Rome Watches Developments

Associated Press
Washington, Nov. 22.—Indications developed today that the United States Government either had begun or was contemplating application of drastic financial pressure to prevent United States trade with Italy and Ethiopia.

Appraisal of unconfirmed reports that some oil tankers and other vessels had cancelled cargo voyages to the Italo-Ethiopian war zone, both from eastern and Gulf ports, officials expressed belief that might be due to the threat of federal agencies to extend notes they hold from shipping companies.

SHIPPING BOARD
The original source of this hint did not elaborate or explain what federal agency might be involved. The Shipping Board, however, holds obligations against a number of United States vessels.

As this situation developed, officials let it be known they expected figures on oil exports in October to show at least a partial disregard of the administration's repeated admonitions against trade with the belligerents.

WARNING BY PRESIDENT
President Roosevelt has warned United States exporters that any transactions they have with the war zone are illegal.

TWO LIONS KILL MAN IN STREET

French Villagers See Escaped Circus Animals Tear Butcher to Pieces

Associated Press
Avignon, France, Nov. 22.—Two lions ran wild in Bagnols-sur-Ceze, a little village near here, today, killed one man, tore the arm of another and killed a pony, before they were finally cornered and shot.

The two beasts escaped from their car in a traveling fair at dawn. A butcher named Mamadou came on them as he turned a corner on his way to work. The lions leaped at him and he was torn to pieces before the eyes of the villagers, who were too terrified to answer his cries for help.

Gendarmes managed to corner and kill one of the man-eaters. The other attacked a farmer in his home. The farmer's arm was almost torn off, but with his free hand he flashed an electric light in the face of the beast, which ran away. It was subsequently cornered and killed.

Various sources said other details of Japanese forces were continuing to gather along the Great Wall coincident with the sudden renewal of agitation for the autonomy of north China. The concentration at Kupeikow was

Plane Altitude Record Claimed

Associated Press
Moscow, Nov. 22.—Pilot Vladimir Kokinaki said today he had set a new world altitude record for airplanes by ascending 47,818 feet, or slightly more than nine miles. The present official record was established by Italian Commander Renato Donati, who reached 47,354 feet (8,960 miles) in a flight from Rome, April 11, 1934.

NEW PLAN FOR POLICE BOARD

Appointment of Standing City Council Committee As Commission Suggested

An alternative suggestion covering the selection of a police commission was discussed today by Aldermen T. W. C. Hawkins and Walter Luney at the City Hall.

As a result of efforts to secure a popular vote as the means of selecting commissioners and opposition to such a course from certain circles, the aldermen offered as a compromise the setting up of a police commission as a standing committee of the City Council, along lines similar to the fire wardens.

"If the people insist upon the franchise, I think the appointment by the mayor of a standing committee of at least six members from the City Council, with the mayor as chairman, would be a satisfactory way of meeting the issue," Alderman Luney stated. He did not infer any criticism of the existing commission, but believed the call for elected representatives to take charge of the commission could be answered in that manner.

REES ADVANTAGES
Alderman Hawkins expressed similar views. He saw as an added advantage in the compromise scheme the ability of the council to keep an itemized check on the expenditures of the police commission.

"I do not suggest that expenditures at present are not in order, but it would be more satisfactory if the council knew exactly how the annual police appropriation was allotted," he said.

At the beginning of the year, Alderman Hawkins noted, the city set aside a certain sum for police estimates and then lost contact with the money directly.

The scheme as suggested would be parallel to the watch committee system in Great Britain.

It was believed in some circles that it would be of considerable assistance to the police department in as much as certain matters, at present handled

A. E. HAYNES PASSES AWAY

Business Leader was Native Son of Pioneer Victoria Family; Well Known Here

Arthur E. Haynes, sixty-three, native son and an active business leader in the community for the last forty years, died this morning at his residence, 1373 Monterey Avenue.

He had been ill and away from business since July. Before that he had never had an illness in his life, but since had undergone three major operations.

Mr. Haynes was born in Victoria in 1872. He was educated at the Boys' Central School and at the Victoria High School, where he won the Lieutenant-Governor's medal for scholarship.

His father and mother were among the original settlers in the colony of Vancouver Island and Victoria. (Turn to Page 2, Col. 4.)

Cities Must Have Help Mayors Say

Municipal Heads of Victoria and Vancouver See Provincial Government and Urge Consideration of Their Problems at Dominion Conference

The cities of Victoria and Vancouver cannot carry on without a complete revision of the means of financing their non self-sustaining services, the provincial government was told this morning by a delegation consisting of Mayor G. G. McGeer, K.C., of Vancouver; Mayor David Leeming of Victoria, and Aldermen G. C. Miller and G. McKee of Vancouver.

The two mayors went to see the government, they said, to stress the importance of having their troubles discussed at the Ottawa conference next month.

Mr. McGeer said afterwards the delegation was pleased with the reception their representations had received, being aware beforehand that the answer depended on the outcome of the conference.

Premier Pattullo said the government was fully alive to the municipal situation. At Ottawa, he indicated, two of the main points of provincial interest would be unemployment and the clarifying of jurisdiction on taxation matters.

He pointed out, also, that although trade treaties would stimulate activity and create work, something must be done in the meantime to take care of the unemployed. To meet this condition the province is advocating a public works program.

In a statement after the meeting with the government, Mayor McGeer said Vancouver and Victoria could not carry on unless there was a re- (Turn to Page 2, Col. 1.)

Great Lava Stream Turns Toward City of Hilo, Forty Miles Away, Slag Will Be Blasted Under Volcanologist's Directions and River Will Be Diverted; Glow on Sky Seen Yesterday Evening in Honolulu, 200 Miles Away

Associated Press
Hilo, Hawaii, Nov. 22.—Mauna Loa Volcano sent a vast flow of lava thirteen miles long down its slopes today, with possibility it might be diverted toward this city of 20,000, forty miles distant.

For the first time in history, the eruption of Mauna Loa was visible last night in Honolulu, more than 200 miles in an airline from the 13,675-foot peak.

The spectacle also was seen by voyagers in ships in the region of the island. The fire to-day was nearing a "critical point on the Mauna Loa-Mauna Kea saddle on the great mountain from which it might turn toward Hilo or away.

CANADA-RUSSIA TRADE EXPLORED

Canadian Press
Ottawa, Nov. 22.—Resumption of trade with Russia as part of the government's policy of world-wide trade expansion to-day was reported in official circles as very probable.

"I think we should trade with every country," Hon. W. D. Euler, Minister of Trade and Commerce, stated when approached on the likelihood of resumed trade relations with the Soviet republic in the near future.

The Bennett government in February, 1931, placed an embargo against Russian woodpulp, lumber, timber of all kinds, asbestos and dressed furs.

Should the molten river turn toward Hilo and threaten the city, Volcanologist Thomas A. Jaggar plans to divert the stream by blasting slag proceeds lava and blasting in its path causes the lava to burst through the slag in the direction of the blast.

DESCRIBED BY OBSERVER
Alfred Prestera, radio operator, from his station 9,000 feet up Mauna Kea's side to-day described the flow in the Associated Press as seen from his vantage point. He said there was no cessation of the eruption, which began at 7 p.m. yesterday.

Despite possibility of danger, residents were thrilled by the spectacle and few slept last night.

FIRST SINCE OCTOBER, 1934
It was the first volcanic outbreak on Hawaii Island since Kilauea erupted in October, 1934.

National Park observers said there was no immediate danger. The volcano was stirred from two years' slumber last night by an earthquake which also sent a small but damaging tidal wave pounding against the shores of Hawaii Island.

The eruption lighted the countryside with a blaze of red light last night.

Pact Expected To Thaw Farm Debt

Kingsford-Smith Search Is Failure

Singapore Straits Settlements, Nov. 22.—Renewed hopes of finding Sir Charles Kingsford-Smith and Tom Pethybridge alive were dimmed tonight when a rescue airplane reported it had failed to find them on Sayer Island, in the Bay of Bengal off Borneo.

The airplane went to Air Star, British Malaya, for the night and will resume its search along the east coast peninsula to-morrow.

Hopes the famous transoceanic flier and his companion, long lost on a flight from England to Australia, might still be alive had been revived by the sight of flames rising from the lonely island.

The master of the British steamship Pasha reported sighting the flames on Sayer Island, in the Bay of Bengal. It was over the bay that Kingsford-Smith and Pethybridge, co-pilot, were last seen by a fellow flier, C. J. Melrose, bucking a raging monsoon just two weeks ago.

Increased Canadian - U.S. Trade Will Benefit Insurance and Loan Companies on Prairies, Says Toronto Writer

Canadian Press
Toronto, Nov. 22.—The potentiality of outstanding importance about the new Canada-United States reciprocity pact is the likelihood of its "thawing" farm debt and restoring the buying power of western and agricultural Canada, said E. D. Loney, financial editor of the Toronto Globe, in a news page story today.

"Canadian loans, trust and life insurance companies hold upward of $800,000,000 in first mortgage investments on agricultural properties, the great bulk of which financial authorities believe will be favorably affected by anticipated improvements in farm income, arising from benefits of the recently completed trade agreement between Canada and the United States.

The possibility that this huge load of debt, which has been the cause of gravest concern, may be lightened by the influence of increased trade is (Turn to Page 2, Col. 2.)

WRITER FLIES OVER ETHIOPIA

James A. Mills of U.S. Sees Southern Towns But No Large Italian Forces

James A. Mills, veteran Associated Press foreign staff writer, was the first United States newspaperman to fly over the southern front in the Italian-Ethiopian war. In the following dispatch he describes the dramatic trip.

Addis Ababa, Nov. 22.—I have just completed a 700-mile flight over the southern front, penetrating two-thirds of the way into Ogaaden Province right to the battle lines and south to Dagga Bur.

During the outgoing and return flights, my plane paralleled Emperor Haile Selassie's giant, single-motored ship for parts of the journey, while he was making his first visit to the war zone.

OVER GORRAHEI

I flew over Gorrahei, which the Italians occupy, flying sufficiently high to outdistance Italian anti-aircraft fire.

From there I flew to Dagga Bur, 150 miles northeast of Gorrahei, which is bombed daily by the Italians, and thence to Jijiga, 100 miles farther to the northeast and general headquarters for the Ethiopian southern armies.

The population of Dagga Bur, mistaking my plane for an Italian craft, fled the city.

AMERICAN HOSPITAL

Two Italian planes were reported to have preceded me over Jijiga and nearby Harar, flying to Diredawa to observe the movements of the Emperor, who was preparing to return by air to Addis Ababa.

I flew over Dagga Bur, where Dr. Robert W. Hockman has the only American field hospital in Ethiopia. It was impossible to land, but I could plainly discern stretcher bearers carrying wounded to Dr. Hockman's hospital.

NO ARMIES SEEN

Flying thence toward Gorrahei, I could discern no large bodies of either Ethiopian or Italian troops. This apparently proved most of the Italian activities thus far have been confined to air bombing and tank attacks.

South of Dagga Bur I was shown fragments of several Italian tanks which the Ethiopians had captured and wrecked. The Ethiopians claimed they had beheaded all occupants as an example of the fate they said awaited other Italians attempting to rob Ethiopia of its independence.

Everywhere in the night-hour flight through the war zone I found unbounded enthusiasm for the Emperor.

"Now that we have seen him on the actual battlefield, we know he will be as great in war as in peace and we are sure he will lead us to victory like Menelik," was one expression.

The name of Haile Selassie was on everyone's lips. It was clear the Emperor's visit stimulated the morale of his troops.

All seemed impatient to face the blackbirds.

STORM KILLS SCORE IN ITALY

Many Injured As Houses Destroyed by Wind; Fishing Craft Missing

Associated Press

Rome, Nov. 22.—At least twenty persons were killed and scores injured to-day in a terrific storm which struck southern Italy.

Nine persons were killed at Catania alone.

Houses collapsed under the force of the wind.

Officials feared there might be a great loss from fishing craft caught at sea.

Ten persons were known to be killed at Serrano San Bruno.

A man drowned in a flooded stream at Messina.

GREEK KING DELAYED

Damage throughout southern Italy, particularly in the vineyards, was reported to be immense. Most of the trellises in the vineyards were swept flat by the wind.

At Nanking, the congress of the Kuomintang (National Chinese People's Party) adopted measures providing for a "great emphasis on the enforcement of local self-government throughout the country."

TALKS RENEWED

Shanghai, Nov. 22 (Associated Press).—The air of confidence which has prevailed in official Chinese quarters for the last two days concerning the Sino-Japanese situation was dispelled to-night by reports regarded as reliable.

These reports had it that Japanese militarists were reopening negotiations with factions seeking autonomy for North China.

There were also advices from Tokyo that the Japanese Foreign Office was lukewarm toward the Chinese National government's plan for dealing with the northern crisis.

Tokyo, Nov. 22.—Was Minister Yoshiyuki Kawashima pressed vigorously to-day for cabinet acceptance of Japanese military views supporting the interrupted programme for secession of five North China provinces.

Japanese political experts said the life of the government possibly depended on the issue. With dispatches from China telling of nearly complete suspension of the autonomy scheme, Tokyo officials professed innocence in the movement for separation of the five northern provinces from the central Nationalist government at Nanking.

Although civilian leaders in Japan seemed to be restraining the Japanese military on the continent temporarily from working for any separatist movement, a strong army element still insisted original plans for secession of North China should be carried out.

regarded as of first importance among the numerous advantageous factors involved in the reciprocity agreement.

LONDON VIEW

London, Nov. 22.—"It looks as if Canada had conceded more than it intended," said the New Statesman and Nation, a leading political weekly, commenting to-day on the trade agreement signed at Washington last week.

The New Statesman asserted the admission of United States goods into Canada at intermediate tariff rates was likely to be of considerable help to United States manufacturers in competition with those of Great Britain and foreign countries.

President Roosevelt, the weekly said, with a 1936 election before him, had to be a good deal more careful than Prime Minister King, who can look forward to five years of office in which to deal with the "vested interests" which shelter behind every tariff wall.

In a world so tariff-ridden, the New Statesman continued, Prime Minister King and President Roosevelt have caused to be reasonably well satisfied. It added that even the British manufacturers who may expect some intensification of United States competition in Canada will probably think the risk worth while for the sake of the impetus given by a more liberal trade policy.

ing rubber, manufactures and photographic films are not on the list of goods prohibited for export to Italy under the order-in-council passed by the Canadian government imposing sanctions.

The other items which Italy is banning entry from Canada, already covered by the Canadian sanctions order-in-council prohibiting exports, according to the cable, are aluminum and nickel.

Nickel and aluminum, already barred for shipment to Italy by Canada's sanctions action, comprise chief Canadian exports to Italy, with totals of $1,927,787 for nickel and $70,174 for aluminum for the twelve months ended October 31. The other products which Italy is reported to be banning were worth $155,000 as exports for the year.

EXPORT CLASSES

Of Canada's total trade with Italy worth approximately $5,800,000, exports amounted to $3,580,973. An analysis of exports for the year shows the following values on the additional Canadian items Italy is reported to be banning: Wheat flour, $26,250; liquor, $1,830; agricultural implements, $10,849; tires, including tire casings (presumed to be included in cable), $80,425; adding machines, $980; iron oxide, $21,491; rubber belting, $16,628; rubber manufactures, $3,474; sausage casings (presumed to be referred to in the cable), $19,038, and photographic films, $3,088.

Bennett's Name In Trek Songs

Crowd at Regina Riot Inquiry Smiles As Singers' Words Recalled

Canadian Press

Regina, Nov. 22.—Quantities of sticks and clubs discovered in exhibition grounds buildings after the On-to-Ottawa trekkers had left last July occupied the royal commission investigating the Dominion Day riot at the hearing to-day.

Out of a large box brought into the room in the courthouse where the inquiry is proceeding, Constable Donald F. Taylor of the R.C.M.P., now stationed at Winnipeg, picked numerous clubs and sticks which he said he had taken from the stadium on July 9, four days after the trekkers had left.

Edward S. Smyth, superintendent of the exhibition grounds, told of discovery of many clubs in debris cleaned up in the stadium and other buildings after the men had left, and he identified several articles from the box as exhibition property.

BENNETT SONGS

As the inquiry proceeded to-day first list of the reputed plot to kidnap Rt. Hon. R. B. Bennett, last summer, came when B. D. Hogarth, K.C., counsel for the commission, introduced as evidence a song sheet of the trekkers.

"Here is something that might lead Mr. Bennett to think he was to be kidnapped," said Mr. Hogarth, reading extracts from the songs, as smiles spread through the crowd listening to the inquiry.

One song read: "Be careful, Bennett, or you may leave us, never to return."

Strikers' Counsel Frank J. Cunningham suggested this had reference to the impending election.

Another song said: "And his old, fat knees will tremble when he hears the marchers' song."

Chief Justice Brown, chairman of the inquiry, suggested the men had composed songs in a spirit of fun.

OUTLAWS REPORTED

A sum of $31,257 was spent by Saskatchewan in providing relief for the On-to-Ottawa marchers during their stay here last June and July, T. M. Molloy, provincial labor commissioner, told the commission.

Of that amount the federal government had been billed for $31,108. The expenditures included $8,844 for food and $21,762 for transportation when the men were returned to their homes.

by the department itself, could be turned over to the committee and would leave the police with little to do other than their actual police duties.

No action could be taken on the matter, however, without provincial government authority, as well as the approval of the City Council, it was believed.

It was brought forward chiefly as a possible means of reconciling those forces in the city which stand by the present system and those which are ready in favor of an elective method of choosing commissioners.

ring nations are at stake—own risk. To this was added yesterday an appeal by Secretary of the Interior Ickes that the oil industry voluntarily halt shipments to both countries.

A Commerce Department report said oil exports in September were higher than in August, "indicating that the stimulation due to the war-seas and other factors outweighs the usual seasonal decline." Exports were slightly smaller, however, in October than in September.

CONTRARY TO POLICY

Washington, Nov. 22 (Associated Press).—The United States Shipping Board has reminded steamship owners and operators who owe it money that the shipment of raw materials to Italy and Ethiopia is contrary to the government's policy.

HINT AT REFRAISALS

Rome, Nov. 22.—Fascist authorities expressed open suspicion to-day over Secretary Ickes's call on the United States oil industry to halt shipments to Italy and Ethiopia, declaring this action brought the United States closer to the ranks of "sanctionist" countries subject to reprisals.

Fascist leader said the American oil administrator's request was a serious threat to their war-time oil supply.

Italian engineers conceded that if other non-sanctionist nations followed the lead of the United States, Italy's fuel and lubricant problem would become serious.

As suspiciously as they eyed the Washington action, Fascists began to turn an even colder stare toward Franco-Italian peace conversations at Paris. Officials became silent about chances for any fruitful results.

NOTE FROM BRITAIN

London, Nov. 22.—Great Britain offered a reply to-day to Italy's recent note protesting against application of League of Nations sanctions for the Fascist warfare on Ethiopia.

The British note, expected to be handed to Dino Grandi, Italian ambassador in London, was understood to be polite but firm, making clear to Premier Mussolini that Britain did not intend to lift the League penalties.

Corpus Christi, Tex., Nov. 22.—The Corpus Christi crude oil company, announced to-day, it would continue to ship oil to Italy as long as no embargo is placed on the commodity by the United States. Three Italian tankers sailed from here this week with more than 100,000 barrels of oil for an undesignated Italian port.

Board Told Canada Needs Oil Refineries

ould assure the western provinces of a dependable flow at a reasonable price.

TEXAS FIELDS

J. J. Frawley of the Alberta Attorney-General's department asked Dr. Lederer if anyone in the oil business ever "regarded the Texas oil fields as a blessing from Providence for the people of North America?"

He said he regarded any natural resource as a blessing, but condemned the abuse of it.

"Is there any reason why the people of Canada should not buy their gasoline in Texas and take advantage of that natural resource?" asked Mr. Frawley.

"You have the right if you can do it," said Dr. Lederer, "but I doubt right now if you can get a dependable supply of gasoline in the United States to meet your requirements."

The United States expert said he knew nothing about Canada's tariff requirements, but he knew other countries which, like Canada, had no supplies of crude oil, resorted to tariffs to build up a domestic refining industry and bought control of crude oil supplies in foreign countries. The United States, the United Kingdom, France, Italy and Russia, all had followed that policy.

The United States could obtain cheaper gasoline in South America than it could produce at home, but maintained a tariff to protect its own industry, he said.

The hearing adjourned until Monday.

PLAYGROUNDS AT LADYSMITH

Ladysmith, Nov. 22.—The city council, in session Wednesday evening, was asked by the board of school trustees to endorse a proposal that a new area of 48,000 square feet be added to the present limits of the Central School playground grounds. The council approved the plan, but will ask that actual work of clearing and enclosing be delayed until all angles of the situation are thoroughly clarified. It is anticipated that work will commence early in the year.

The Native Sons and Native Daughters of B.C. Post No. 7, are ready to proceed with additions to their headquarters on First Avenue and permission is sought from the council to begin work. A new kitchen and large dining hall will be added to the present premises. The permit was granted.

Dilapidated properties which have reverted to the city continue as a problem for discussion, and two such buildings were sold for a total of $16 to a bidder. Who announced his intention of employing the salvaged material as part of a home he intends to erect soon upon another lot.

Another city property in good condition was sold for $150. Alderman Steele reported that work on fencing the Abbotsford Hotel was proceeding, and recommended that the council

ROCK AWAY HEART TROUBLE, NOW

Associated Press

St. Louis, Mo.—An oscillating bed, designed by Dr. C. E. Sanders, veteran Kansas City physician, to "rock" away heart trouble, was demonstrated by its inventor to-day before a congress of doctors.

Dr. Sanders, a general practitioner, said the bed operates by electricity like a see-saw, utilizing the principle of gravity to improve blood circulation and ease the strain on over-burdened hearts.

He said he had some outbuildings in connection with the large hotel condemned and destroyed.

Permission was granted to have the recommendation placed in effect.

CRISIS IN JAPAN

NO CRYSTAL GAZING OR OTHER EXPEDIENT of clairvoyance was needed on which to forecast the political crisis which it is reported has developed in Japan over Japanese policy in regard to northern China. It was inevitable that sooner or later there would be a sharp cleavage between the military and civilian elements within the cabinet over a programme which, no matter how immediately practicable it would be, in the end might plunge Japan into chaos.

There are much wider implications than those of mere conquest in the systematic territorial looting of China. There is, in the first place, the cost of military adventures to the aggressor country which, in this case, is much beyond the capacity of the Japanese people to bear. There is the effect upon the outside world, which is closely watching Japan's activities in northern China and which eventually would have to isolate her in the same way in which it isolated Italy, if they were continued. Hence, both at home and abroad the policy promoted by the military imperialists of Japan must have reactions of a nature which even nations of greater wealth, resources and power could not endure.

These wider implications are realized by the statesmen and sagacious commercial leaders of Japan. They are not realized by the war leaders whose minds operate on a single track and, who, like the Bourbons of old, learn nothing from history, and do not want to learn. To them nothing counts but immediate conquest to-day, regardless of cost or consequences.

During the last few weeks it has been significant that announcements of Japan's intentions in northern China have emanated from army leaders instead of the government at Tokyo. It is unusual for a nation to declare through its military leaders its policy in respect of any other country, and the inference is that up to this time the war department, which is responsible only to the Emperor, has elbowed the other services aside as far as Japanese policy in China is concerned. Now, we are informed, a halt has been called to the march into China, that the programme by which from three to five Chinese provinces were to be cut away and placed under puppet rule dominated from Tokyo has been abandoned, for the time being at any rate, and that whatever constitutional readjustment may be made in those localities, Chinese sovereignty is not to be disturbed.

Beyond doubt heavy outside pressure has been exercised upon Tokyo by representatives of foreign governments to check the designs of the army leaders, and it is just as certain that the financial interests of Japan have been able to paint a convincing picture of the ruinous consequences of further military operations against China. A few months ago the Minister of Finance told the ministry that Japan could not possibly provide funds demanded for the war services, that further expenditure for these services would exhaust the national income, and that it would be impossible to extract additional revenues from the taxpayers without creating a critical domestic situation.

If, in spite of the outside and inside efforts to moderate Japan's policy in China, the war leaders continue to go their own way, Japan may have on her hands a crisis at home which may evolve into something more disastrous than a cabinet resignation. This kind of imperialism, without exception, always produces revolution in the long run, and the road to that lurid finale is much shorter in this modern age than it was a century ago. We merely have to call the Hohenzollerns, Hapsburgs and Romanoffs as expert witnesses to this truth.

UNSUNG HEROES OF SCIENCE

A SOLDIER WHO GIVES UP HIS LIFE to save thousands of his fellows from destruction is honored as a great hero, and his name is recorded on monuments and in the history books. A scientist who does precisely the same thing is apt to go altogether unnoticed, save for the plaudits of his own associates.

A short time ago Dr. Edison Souza Dantas, bacteriologist at the Butantan Institute in Sao Paulo, Brazil, died of typhus fever. A week later the same disease killed Dr. Jose Lemos Monteiro, who had been Dr. Dantas's superior.

The two scientists had been trying to find new methods of combating typhus, had been working with active typhus virus, and had finally become infected with the disease themselves.

Such deaths are not uncommon in the annals of medical science. They represent human heroism at its noblest—heroism that is utterly selfless, that has no brass bands or waving flags to help it get started and that usually goes, quite unrecorded.

These two Brazilians were the sort of people who give one a new faith in the capabilities of the human race.

ITALY STRIKES BACK

ITALY HAS STRUCK BACK AT CANADA in retaliation for sanctions imposed against her by this Dominion, according to information cabled to Hon. W. D. Euler, Minister of Trade and Commerce in the King government, to-day.

There is nothing very much for Canada to worry about in this announcement. We have been selling to Italy about three-and-one-quarter millions of dollars' worth of goods a year. We have been buying from Italy about two-and-one-half millions of goods a year. Much of our imports from Italy have been dry wines.

Italy, however, will not be able to get Canadian nickel, flour, agricultural implements, iron oxide, tires, rubber belting, and many other things which she wants just now. But even if the trade exchange between the two countries was much heavier than it is there was no escape from the situation which has arisen, in view of the course of the League of Nations in invoking sanctions. Canada as a member of the League was bound to prohibit the export of certain key products to Italy and the import of Italian products.

MR. J. E. MILLER

MR. J. E. MILLER, WHO PASSED AWAY Wednesday, was favorably known throughout Canada and his loss will be keenly regretted in many quarters. For the greater part of his life he was identified with the Dominion civil service, which he entered in Kingston, Ontario, in 1883, and at the time of his retirement was the oldest person, in point of service, on the country's employment list. After spending some years as Collector of Inland Revenue in Vancouver, he came to Victoria in 1907 to succeed William Gill as inspector of that service for British Columbia and the Yukon. In 1921, following the merger of the customs and excise branches, he became inspector of both services. He was highly regarded by Ottawa for his ability.

Mr. Miller found time to interest himself in many activities apart from his official duties. He was interested in every form of sport. In his youth he was a fine rugby player—and when, in later days, he was not able to take a tackle or register a touch-down, he stood on the sidelines and lived his active rugby days all over again. He donated the Miller Cup which is emblematic of the championship of the British Columbia Rugby Union. Until illness cast its sinister spell upon him he remained a champion of the great game of rugby.

For several years he had been an ardent golfer—a member of the Victoria Golf Club—and he and many others of his age enjoyed a round on the seagirt links at Oak Bay. He was always in the list of entrants for the competitions of the Seniors' Northwest Golf Association, matching shots with such other stalwarts as Sir Frank Bernard, Dr. J. S. Plakett, Senator Barnard, J. E. Wilson, and a host of other devotees of the royal and ancient pastime too numerous to mention.

Mr. Miller, of course, will be remembered by all members of the Masonic Order who have had association with him in that regard. Several years ago the thirty-third and last degree of Freemasonry was conferred upon him by the Supreme Grand Council of the Scottish Rite in Montreal. He was a charter member of the Victoria Valley of that order. He was thorough in this and all his other activities.

To allude to Mr. Miller again as a sportsman—he played the game to the end. Genuine sympathy from many will go out to his widow.

WHAT OTHER PAPERS SAY

NEUTRALITY AND MORE NEUTRALITY
The St. Louis Post-Dispatch

We are not merely preaching neutrality. We are practicing neutrality. We are not waving Utopian banners. We think war trade is bad business, economically and in every other way, and as a matter of plain hard common sense we want none of it. That is what the government at Washington is saying. It is what the country wants it to say.

ALL MONEY LOOKS GOOD TO SOME
The Boston Christian Science Monitor

A new dollar bill makes its bow this month. Enthusiastically it will be the "handicapped ever." We are all for beauty, of course, but the canny streak in us wants to know if it will buy more. "Handsome is as handsome does," as countryfolk in England say.

BACK TO A WIDER FIELD
The Saint John Telegraph Journal

Canadians need not apologize for turning their eyes momentarily away from world affairs. They have had an important domestic event to conduct. They have attended to it as they can, and they can't try to pick up the threads of happenings in the larger field.

CANADA CHUCKLES
The Rochester Democrat and Chronicle

When the officials of the AAA take their vote among American farmers on the popularity of crop control measures, they might extend it to include the wheat producing sections of Canada and Argentina. There, it may be imagined, the vote would be enthusiastically for the New Deal, especially for that part of it which calls for restriction of American wheat production. As a consequence of the AAA security, doors have been opened to Canadian and Argentine wheat, in spite of the high duties that must be paid to get it here.

A SOLEMN DEDICATION
The Winnipeg Free Press

The event is one for deep thankfulness by the Canadian people. It is also an occasion for a very solemn dedication by the Liberal leaders to the service of their country. The people have turned to them in hope and have vested in them the powers and responsibilities of the state. The character and emphasis of the decision makes the government which is about to take office a National Government in the truest sense of the word; and it should be able to give a leadership which will ensure the co-operation of all the patriotic and forward-looking elements in Canada.

Just Folks by Edgar A. Guest

AT GRAND CANYON

I'd always thought erosion, wear and tear,
The tool of ruin used by Father Time,
The cruel enemy of all things fair,
The bleak antithesis of works sublime.

To me erosion was an ugly word,
Akin to desolation, death and pain.
I should have thought the use of it absurd,
With grandeur past men's genius to attain.

Yet at the canyon, awed by splendore vast
And maelstrom men tremble to behold,
I saw the epic of the ages past,
Sublimely and magnificently told.

"What Master Artist chiselled dome and spire?
What set those giant cliffs with rose aflame?
Answered a scholar hearing me inquire:
"Erosion is that Master Artist's name."

(Copyright, 1935, Edgar A. Guest.)

Loose Ends

Another vile idea from the experts—a patriotic performance by British Columbia drinkers—a mistake in capacity—and a dull day on Broad Street.

By BRUCE HUTCHISON

LAUGH

A LEADING American university announces the establishment of a Department of Humor. This is a nasty and dangerous idea. Apparently nothing, not even laughter, is to be left to us common people, to be practiced in our own crude way when and where we please. Laughter is to be taken over by experts as they have taken over nearly everything else in life.

They took over love some time ago, psycho-analyzed it, explained it in terms of science and moved it down from the level of the spirit to the level of biology.

They took over the child and psycho-analyzed him and showed that he was merely a problem in psychology, a disintegrable bundle of complexes, repressions and fixations instead of a gift from heaven as parents used to think.

They took over golf and bridge, which used to be pleasant games for the amusement of an innocent primitive race, and made them into twin sciences with a ritual, a ruling class, an iron-clad autocracy, a priestcraft and a witchcraft and the fiercest kind of tyranny and oppression.

Now laughter is to be investigated, torn apart, dissected and explained in terms of science. Pretty soon laughter, like golf and bridge and psychology, will be reserved only for university graduates and Doctors of Philosophy, who never have anything to laugh about anyway.

I am for ignorant laughter that comes from the heart. The world is full of these days of educated stuff that comes from the brain, and look at it! All we have left is the right to laugh at ourselves. If that is going to be made part of a university course, with Doctors of Reliability teaching us how to do it, then, respectfully, I must announce I am going to become a Conservative. I am against progress.

WE WANT SPEED

ACCORDING to the latest figures, British Columbia, gargantuan in all its appetites, not only is drinking more but is killing more in automobile smashups than other parts of Canada. . . . Two phenomena which may have some vague connection. The people are becoming aroused. The newspapers are writing editorials. The police are issuing warnings. All over America an educational crusade against automobile killings is under way.

But actually, we don't want to stop accidents, not badly enough to do anything about it. Any traffic expert will tell you that if we could cut down speed we could cut down accidents, and we could cut down speed if we wanted to by limiting it automatically by mechanical governors on the engines of all cars. Such devices have been perfected, the police tell me, and could be made compulsory, set at, say, thirty-five miles an hour. Then you would see your motor deaths cut in half, at least.

We won't insist on any such arrangement even though it is illegal to go more than thirty-five miles an hour. Our legislators fix speed laws but expect and intend them to be broken. If they didn't they would limit speed by something more effective than traffic signals. The people of America, up to this point, prefer to kill about 40,000 persons a year rather than give up the thrill of speed. In the interests of safety they will sacrifice almost anything but their own pleasure.

HONEST PRIDE

TO THE SOUL of the patriot, the semi-annual accounts of the liquor board, just made public, cannot fail to bring a thrill of honest pride.

SIDE GLANCES

By George Clark

"Oh, that old gossip! I can't wait to tell you what she said about Irene."

They reveal that British Columbians are now purchasing and consuming liquor at the rate of $15,000,000 a year. This is not quite up to our old 1929 standard, when we drank over $20,000,000 a year, and the average annual wage in Canadian industry was $1,045. We haven't quite reached that peak of prosperity again, but the increase in liquor sales indicates that we are approaching it and will yet achieve the old perfect economic balance.

One knows, of course, that nothing could hold British Columbians down long, that they would rally around the liquor store when the test came and keep the provincial treasury afloat, if they had to float themselves in the process.

No carping radical can deny that recovery is definitely under way when we are now spending nearly four times as much on drinks as we are spending on the unemployed. There are only 70,000 people on the dole in British Columbia now and there must be a hundred times that many drinkers. It is all very encouraging.

The trouble with the unemployed is that they don't buy liquor. They seem to lack a true sense of their duty to the treasury. That is why an unemployed carpenter, who could build a house, is an economic loss and liability to the state, whereas a retired sausage manufacturer, who couldn't make anything but sausages and has ceased to do even that, is a first-class citizen. He still finds the treasury several times a day.

I calculate that if we were to divert the money we spend on the unemployed to the useful purchase of liquor, we would be back to our 1929 standard right away. Unemployment relief, so far as I can calculate it, is costing us far too much. It is costing us the price of around 25,000,000 drinks a year. How long can that go on?

UNDER-ESTIMATE

SPEAKING of which, a Vancouver court has held that when a man was found with 125 bottles of home brew and 480 empties in his basement, the police were entitled to draw the inference that these supplies were not for domestic use and probably were to be bootlegged.

With great respect, one must say that the court seems to underestimate most grossly the capacities of a vigorous British Columbian. A hundred and twenty-five bottles merely! Why old Mr. Whiffleton, whom I drive home from town nearly every day, could drink that in less than two weeks alone and unassisted. To-day was alone and unassisted. To-day he told me he had drunk a couple of bottles too many and insisted on singing "Rule Britannia" all the way home. When I said I doubted that he would ever drink a bottle too many, he insisted that ten was too many, whatever I might say, and got quite violent about it. Eight, he said, was a reasonable number, but ten was too many. His habit when he goes to town three times a week is to drink half a dozen.

The courts don't seem to have a realistic understanding of these finer points of capacity. A ruling against 125 bottles of home brew is calculated to discourage the largest and most profitable retail business in the province.

NEWS

THE BULLETIN boards in the front office of this newspaper were rather full the other morning. It was stated that two men were going to fly an airplane over the South Pole that day. Things were serious in the Orient. Japan was gobbling up half of China. The powers were anxious. Canada had just signed a new trade treaty with New Zealand. There had been a big battle in Ethiopia. Mussolini was impounding the Italian gold supply.

As I stood there reading the bulletins I overheard a couple of early Victorians talking very profoundly to one another.

"Nothing much happening to-day," said the first. "Things are very quiet."

"There's nothing in the papers these days," said his friend.

"They get duller and duller," said the other.

"It's like a cold spell we've been having," said his friend.

"You got to expect cold at this time of the year," the first one said, and hobbled away.

Ex-playboy's Austrian Coup Upsets Nazi Move For Bloc

Prince Ernst Starhemberg in the uniform of his personally organized Heimwehr forces gives no suggestion of the pre-war playboy. Below, a photo—the first for which she ever posed—of his mother, Princess Fanny, who modestly clings to the family estate.

London Correspondence of The Victoria Daily Times

London. — The European political prophets who blithely predicted a new bloc composed of Germany, Austria, Hungary and Poland, to which Italy might adhere and change the course of history, have been confounded by the young man who, until the end of the World War involved his country in a crisis, was a typical playboy of the wealthy nobility. He is Prince Ernst Rudiger Starhemberg, whose unexpected march on Vienna with his own Heimwehr forced the resignation of the Austrian cabinet and established him as the strong man of the little country, second not even to Chancellor Schuschnigg.

The conjecture he so completely upset had been based on a sequence of recent events.

Poland and Germany, since their ten-year peace pact, have grown ever more friendly. Recently General Julius Gombos, premier of Hungary, went on a hunting trip with General Goering where something more than deer were stalked. It was hinted Goering sketched a German-Polish-Hungarian coalition to which Austria might be added. And if France angered Italy, the latter, too, might be roped in.

HUNGARY BACKS ITALY

Then at Geneva, when the application of sanctions against Italy was being discussed, Austria and Hungary definitely refused to adhere. Hungary explained its close ties of friendship with Italy. Austria did not do much explaining, but Prince Starhemberg acted. In the former Schuschnigg cabinet there were a number of men, adverse to Italian patronage and protection of Austria, who leaned toward Nazi Germany. Prince Starhemberg by his coup secured a new cabinet, in which Schuschnigg remained Chancellor and himself Vice Chancellor. But all the other members of the cabinet now are bitterly anti-Nazi pro-Italians.

Busy as he is with his war with Ethiopia, Mussolini has thus won an important move in central Europe. Austria is definitely ranged more firmly than ever beside Italy and away from Germany. It will take no part in a German bloc including Poland and Hungary.

STARHEMBERG FAMILY LONG NOBLES

Starhemberg, who has largely brought this about, is one of the proudest aristocrats in all Europe. His family claims to be one of the twelve original noble families of the Holy Roman Empire and to trace back to an emperor who reigned a thousand years ago. Living aloof from public life, the Prince's mother, for instance, only once has posed for a photograph.

Until the after-war period, the young Prince spent his time idly. He rode fine horses, swam, played tennis, went hunting. Then revolution came to Austria and up to the doors of his ancestral castle, Prince Starhemberg stopped being a playboy. At his own expense he formed the nucleus of what became the Heimwehr that fought the Socialists.

STARHEMBERG HOLDS BALANCE

Vienna was definitely Red, but Starhemberg and his coadjutors enlisted the peasantry and kept the country more or less White. There was a constant struggle between city and country until in February, 1934, when the late Chancellor Dollfuss and Starhemberg suppressed the Socialists in Vienna after what amounted to a bloody civil war which lasted several days.

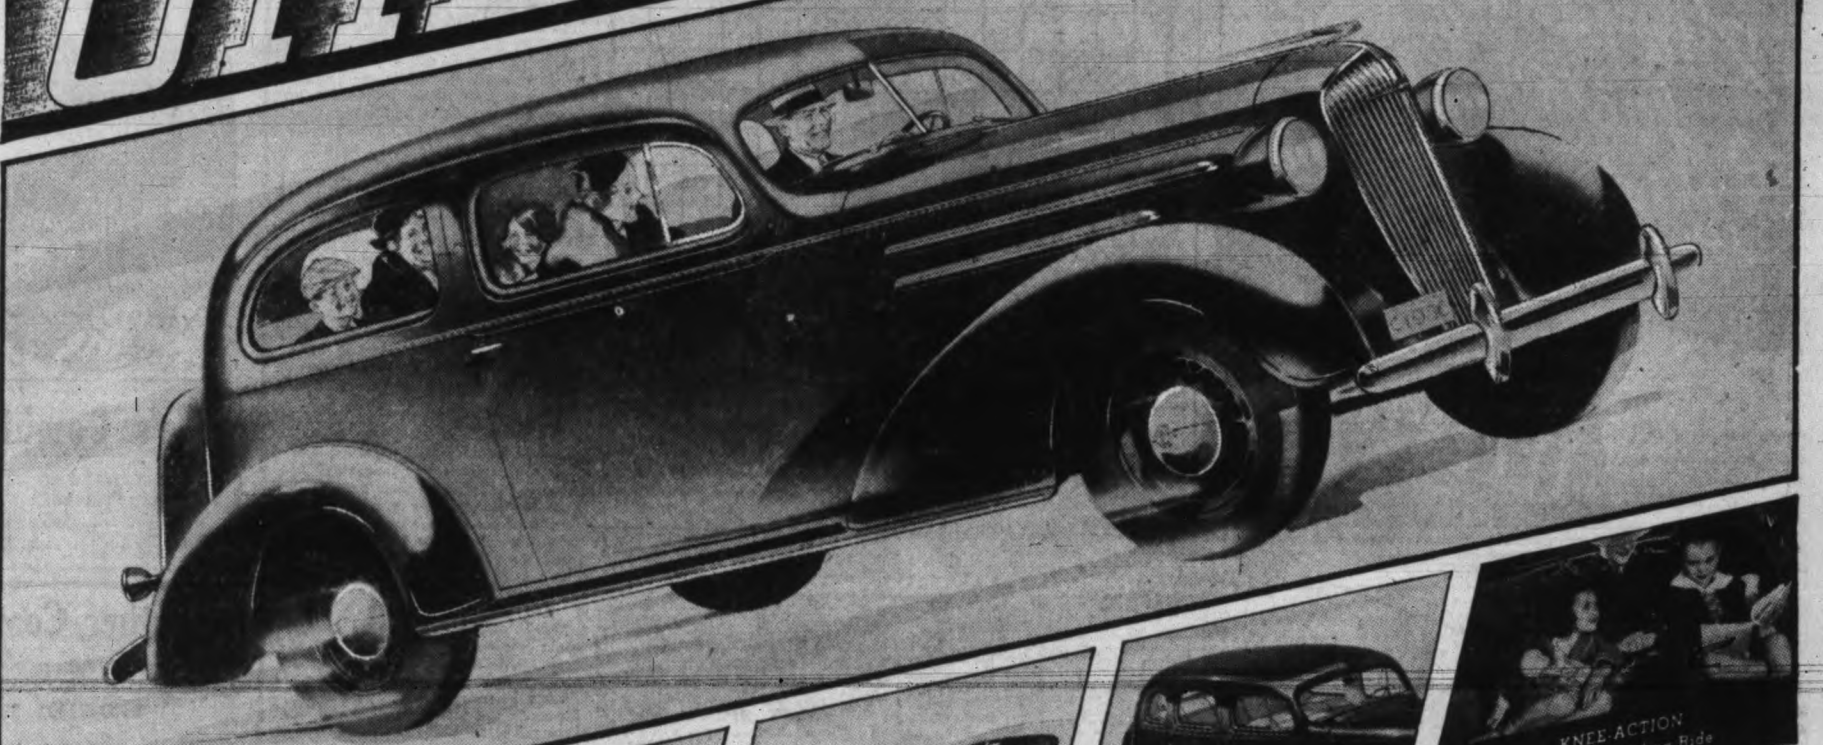

Ever since, Prince Starhemberg has been the man behind the throne. He has fought against Austrian Nazis and fought for closer alliance with Italy. As long as he retains power there is little chance that Austria will be annexed to Germany, especially while he is sure that Italian legions would help him fight any attempted German coup. His position is all the more strange in that his enemies probably largely outnumber him. On the right are the Austrian Nazis, who look to Germany for inspiration. On the left are the embittered working classes of Vienna and the other Austrian cities, who will never forgive the war made upon them, the bombardment of their homes and the

SHOWS VALUE OF PUBLICITY

Results of Bureau's Work Told to Rotarians By George I. Warren

The extent of the work of the Victoria and Island Publicity Bureau and of the results obtained from that work was brought home to members of the Rotary Club at their luncheon yesterday by Rotarian George I. Warren, commissioner of the bureau.

Mr. Warren quoted figures indicating the extent of the increase in the island's tourist business, of the expenditures of tourists on the island, and of the work of the bureau.

In 1935, he said, the number of tourists entering British Columbia as a whole had dropped 28 1/2 per cent from the year before, while the decrease in those coming to Victoria was only one-half of one per cent.

In 1934 British Columbia had an increase of one-half of one per cent, against a rise of 46 1/2 per cent for Victoria. Up to November 1 of this year, the province's increase was 2 per cent and the island's 28 per cent.

Figures compiled from the answers sent to the questionnaire which were mailed by the bureau to visitors indicated a total expenditure on Vancouver Island by tourists of $1,227,000 last year, and of $2,260,000 this year.

This year each tourist car brought an average of three people for an average stay of five and a half days, and the average expenditure per car was $96.28, of which $42.61 went into the retail stores of Victoria.

These figures, said Mr. Warren, showed conclusively that the work of the bureau was bearing fruit.

PUBLICITY WORK
In indication of the extent of this work, he said that 252 articles on the subject of the attractions of Victoria and the island had been sent to 2,971 publications and four newspaper syndicates in all parts of the world. This publicity matter was estimated to have reached some 10,000,000 people.

The bureau, said Mr. Warren, worked by publicity rather than by straight-paid advertising. The publication of articles in magazines and papers was done on their news value, not for money. The bureau, by distribution of maps and other matter in hotels and camps, brought Victoria into the minds of travelers on all the main highways of the western United States.

The Publicity Bureau and the Tourist Trade Development Association worked in the closest of cooperation, he said. There was no rivalry between the two, their duties being complementary. The bureau brought the tourists to Victoria, and the job of the association was to keep them here.

The economy with which the bureau was carried, he said, was shown by the fact that the total expenditure last year had been only $22,000.

Of this sum 80 per cent had been spent locally, mainly on printing and the like. Only $670 had gone to traveling expenses, including those of the contact men on the roads of the United States.

MUSICAL PROGRAMME
Rotarians were entertained at the luncheon with a musical programme under the direction of Slim Middleton and Bob Wormleighton, show-bos of the Victoria amateur winners, and banjo and mandolin duets by Mr. Hunter and Leo Holden.

George Plowman was elected a member of the board of directors to take the place of Ed Coates, who has moved to Vancouver.

COAL OUTPUT DOWN AGAIN

B.C. Production Drops 28,000 Tons From Last October, Figures Show

Coal production of British Columbia took another slump in October, as compared with the same month of last year, although the usual season improvement between September and October was noted.

The total output, according to Department of Mines figures made public to-day, was 111,572 tons. This compares with 139,321 tons in October, 1934.

The increase from September was 20,400 tons. Last year the monthly increase was 36,300 tons.

The main drop is in the East Kootenay, where Corbin Colliery is closed.

Vancouver Island was down from 62,620 to 55,242 tons, mainly because of the shutdown of No. 5 mine at South Wellington. Western Fuel Corporation No. 1 mine boosted its production from 27,040 to 34,721 tons and several of the small collieries showed an increase. At Comox Colliery the output was down 600 tons from last year.

SIDNEY GIRL PRETTY BRIDE

Miss Merna Lane Married Last Night to Herman J. Lind

One of the prettiest weddings of the season took place last evening in St. Paul's United Church, Sidney, when Merna, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Lane, became the bride of Mr. Herman Julius Lind, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Lind.

Sidney, Rev. Thos. Keyworth officiated, assisted by Rev. W. R. Seeley, who was the minister at Mr. and Mrs. Lane's wedding, thirty-five years ago.

The church was beautifully decorated by friends of the bride with the conventional wedding arch of green vines, yellow and bronze chrysanthemums, with large yellow and white bows marking the background and choir loft. Companion arches were at the head of each aisle, done with green vines on a yellow background, and white bows marking the family pews, the guest pews being marked by fern and tiny yellow bows.

The bride entered the church with her father to the strains of the Lohengrin "Bridal Chorus," played by Miss Kathleen Lowe. She made a charming picture in ankle-length gown, with long sleeves and long skirt, sleeves fastening at the wrist. With this she wore a gold turban and nose veil and gold sandals, and carried an arm bouquet of bronze and gold Buckingham single chrysanthemums with gold streamers.

The bride was attended by her only sister, Miss Laura Lane, in an ankle-length frock of brown silk crepe with silver clips and buckle, and with brown lace set in from shoulder to elbow. Her hat was a brown felt turban with nose veil. She carried an arm bouquet of large yellow chrysanthemums. The groom was attended by his only brother, Mr. Walter Lind. The ushers were Mr. Robert Lane, brother of the bride, and Mr. James Anderson.

During the signing of the register, Mr. W. C. chormaster, rendered "O Promise Me."

Following the church ceremony a large reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. Lane, East Saanich Road. The happy couple stood beneath a pretty arch to receive the congratulations of their many friends. They were assisted by Mrs. Lane, becomingly gowned in blue floral with short jacket and blue felt hat. Mrs. Lind chose brown georgette with matching accessories.

In the dining-room, where supper was served, a handsome three-tier wedding cake, decorated by Mr. O. Thomas as a wedding present, centred the beautifully decorated table, with yellow and mauve streamers, small vases of fern and yellow chrysanthemums and tall white tapers.

The couple left on the midnight boat for Vancouver, en route to Bellingham, where the honeymoon will be spent.

For traveling the bride chose a green tailored dress with overskirt of gold and a black coat with large grey fur collar, and a black felt hat with matching accessories.

Among the many handsome gifts received was a lovely table lamp from the staff of the telephone office of which the bride was a member for many years, and a silver candelabra from St. Paul's church, with which the bride is connected.

Among out-of-town guests were: Mr. Walter Lind, Miss Helen Smith from Vancouver and Miss Laura Lane from Alberni.

CULLEN-O'CONNOR

Of interest to their many friends in Victoria was the wedding quietly celebrated at the Holy Rosary Cathedral, Vancouver, recently when Rev. Father Nichol united in marriage Miss Elizabeth Ann (Lily) O'Connor and Mr. Hubert Cullen.

Miss Rita Motterhead of Victoria as bridesmaid chose a frock of lavender point lace and picture hat of a harmonizing shade. Miss Eva Evans, niece of the bride was a charming flower girl in her pale blue crepe de chine frock. Mr. Thomas O'Connor supported the groom.

A reception was held at the home of Mrs. William Burnett, where Mrs. J. Evans assisted her in receiving the guests. Mrs. Cullen of Clinton, mother of the groom, and Mrs. Motterhead of Victoria, sister of the bride, presided at the urns. Mrs. Harman-Henderson of Campbell River, Mrs. E. Erickson of Everett, sisters of the groom, Miss Margaret White and Miss K. Motterhead of Victoria acted as servers.

Mr. and Mrs. Cullen left for Seattle and on their return will take up residence at Bralorne.

C.P.R. HISTORY IS REVIEWED

Dr. Kaye Lamb Addresses
Business Women's Club
on Project

The history of the Canadian Pacific Railway, as a project and not as a corporation, was fascinatingly reviewed by Dr. Kaye Lamb, provincial archivist, before the Business and Professional Women's Club, his address being the outstanding feature of the annual "National Night" programme.

The gathering took the form of a dinner, held at the Y.W.C.A. and attended by nearly sixty members and friends. Mrs. H. M. Hall presided.

Dr. Lamb went back to 1838, when the rescue of Judge Halliburton, Joseph Howe and Major Robert Carmichael-Smith, together with the mails, from a beleaguered sailing ship by the steamer Sirius in the Atlantic Ocean, engendered the idea in Halliburton and Howe which subsequently led to the establishment of the Canadian Line. Major Carmichael-Smith's experiences on this occasion also led him in 1849 to envision a transcontinental railway from Halifax to Fort Langley, his suggested route closely following that taken later by the C.P.R.

But the gold rush of 1858 in British Columbia stimulated interest in Great Britain in the railway idea, an interest which was further fostered by the Crimean War. This was emphasized the vulnerability of the then best trade route to India in the event of any disturbance in Europe, and led to recognition of the desirability of a railway through Canada to open up a new trade route to the Far East.

After recapitulating the steps taken by Great Britain to foster the project, Dr. Lamb recalled the Hector-Palliser expedition, sent out from England, their explorations resulting in the drawing up of a new map of Canada, and the transcontinental tour made in 1863 by Viscount Milton and Cheale. Cheale's diary of the trip formed the basis of the book published by them on their return to England, and which materially stimulated the transcontinental railway idea.

LOCAL PIONEERS
Reference was made to Walter Moberley, former surveyor-general in 1865, who definitely started the exploration which brought the railway through the Rockies, and Alfred Wadlington, who came to Victoria in 1858 at the time of the gold rush and, ten years later, was an active propagandist of a coast-to-coast railway.

The interest of the address was heightened by the series of old photographs from the Archives, showing a number of these pioneers of railway development, and also various stages in the construction of the C.P.R.

Mrs. Clay read greetings from the following Business and Professional Women's Clubs, all of which were celebrating National Night: Montreal, Guelph, Kitchener-Waterloo, Chatham, Calgary, Edmonton, Vernon, Vancouver, Nanaimo, Hanna and Saskatoon, as well as special greetings from the national president, Mrs. W. H. Stokes, with Mrs. Chas. Conyers at the piano; and "Meditation" (Drum), beautifully sung by Mrs. W. H. Stokes, with Mrs. Chas. Conyers at the piano. Mrs. Hall presented corsage bouquets to Mrs. Stokes, Mrs. Conyers and Miss Smith.

W.A. BAZAAR NETS SUBSTANTIAL SUM

Splendid success attended the annual missionary bazaar of the various branches of the W.A. to Christ Church Cathedral, held in the Memorial Hall on Wednesday afternoon, the material proceeds amounting to $240. Dean Quinston formally opened the undertaking, wishing the women every success in their good work.

Mrs. C. W. Brooks was the general convenor, and each of the branches was responsible for one or other of the prettily decorated and well-laden stalls. Tea was served at tables bright with chrysanthemums and greenery, Miss L. Sill and Mrs. W. H. Hughes having charge of the tea arrangements, assisted by Mrs. H. V. Mills, who acted as hostess, Miss Fairman, Miss I. Beach, Miss I. Venables, Miss D. Dale Johnson, Miss Betty Gedye, Miss Bashford, Miss Mott and Mrs. F. Lee, the latter taking the tea tickets.

Mrs. Colin Cummins and Miss Owen Hichens-Smith delighted the guests with musical numbers during the afternoon.

A Christmas tree, laden with attractive parcels, proved popular with the children, while the exhibition of dolls, dressed in the recent competition among the junior branches of the diocese, drew much admiring comment.

SOLDIER POETS DENOUNCE WAR

Mrs. H. Smith Reviews Bitter
Writings of Great War
Period for "Y" Group

Soldier poets of the Great War were placed in the van of anti-war propagandists by Mrs. Harry Smith in her cleverly analytical address before the Y.W.C.A. readers' group yesterday afternoon.

With biting irony and beautiful language, many of those soldier poets had recorded their experiences during the world conflict, vividly describing its horrors, some denouncing war, others glorifying its victims, but showing little fear of death. Among the most notable Mrs. Smith recalled Rupert Brooke, Allen Seager, Siegfried Sassoon and she read extracts from their poems to illustrate her argument.

Nostalgia underlay many of the war poems, many of the poets revealing that pride in fighting for some particular spot in England was their dominant spirit, rather than for England as a nation. In this class came Hilton Young, Tennyson, Wilfred Gibson, Lett, as well as Rupert Brooke. From time immemorial soldier poets had recorded their impressions of the battle in verse, the speaker continued, and, still later, the robust poems of Kipling and of Tennyson.

To close her talk, Mrs. Smith quoted from Tennyson's "Locke Hall" the prophetic lines beginning "When I dipped into the future..." Mrs. Edwin Tomlin, who presided, announced that Miss Ruth Humphreys would speak at next Thursday's meeting of the group.

VICTORIA WEST UNITED Y.P.S.

The worship service was conducted by the president. Minutes were read and accepted. An invitation was received from the Equinault Y.P.S. to a showing of films taken from the H.M.S. Hood and H.M.S. Dauntless, on Wednesday night.

Next Tuesday the meeting will be in charge of Mrs. C. Milley. After the meeting the executive held a discussion of a play for the Drama Festival. A good attendance of members is expected next week.

Thursday, November 21.
Opened my eyes upon a bright and cheerful morn. The sun doth shine. 'Twould seem the weather did conspire to help me in the matter of Samuel's good temper. 'Twas over breakfast I did touch upon the matter of my allowance. Samuel did look very stern... but 'twas at that moment a sunbeam danced across the table... all in a moment his countenance did change. 'Twas with a smile and then a sigh he once more reached toward his money bags. Myself felt much like dancing with the sunbeam.

display of lace spreads and tablecloths 'T' do 'twas just arrived. Exquisite hand-made lace cloths, of perfect design, in natural color. There be table covers, too, all cobwebby with lace pattern. Do find 'twas lace runners, in pattern I did remember back down the years to my childhood. Now it do become popular again. Mistress Bennett be very proud of a display of rayon lace spreads but just arrived from Scotland. These be priced so reasonably at $4.95.

Turning once more upon Douglas Street, meet Mister Weatherby. He be the new apprentice within Samuel's counting house. He doth smile at me and take my hand with so much deference, my heart did miss a beat. It doth run through my mind my bonnet at least be very becoming. Must speak to Samuel about entertaining Mister Weatherby. 'Tis he so handsome!

With thoughts of entertaining within my mind do turn at once toward the English Bakery at 726 Fort Street. Fine here a new offer. 'Tis mince meat, the finest and richest... Made of ingredients of the best... but 25c a pound. If one doth bring a container. This be a service the English Bakery do offer that should please many. Here, too, be mince pies, made of this same mince meat and with toothsome pastry... 10c and 25c. Small individual pies be 40c a dozen. English Bakery do offer everything of luscious taste and tempting flavour for the good entertainment of guests.

Back down Fort Street and to the Poxy Shoppe for it run within my mind to send Samuel's Mother a bunch of sweet posies. She be older now and not able to rush about as she did do for many years. Ever doth she like to feel she be not forgotten by her relatives and friends. No better way there be to make her feel happy than to send her posies. Within the Poxy Shoppe do find a wealth of fragrant carnations to choose from. Three distinct shades there be of pink and a deep glowing red that doth ever warm the cockles of my heart. Made into a bouquet, how colorful they be. Bright flowers to bring happiness into many hearts. The Poxy Shoppe be very skillful in arranging flowers for friends or for those who be ill.

Within the portals of Diggon's at 1208 Government Street do find many people. They be choosing fine cards for friends far overseas. There be not many days left for mailing far away. Diggon's have many fine suggestions for parceling gifts for friends. Fancy papers, in many shades and of dainty design... fine crystal ties, cellophane, tinsel and foil ribbons. They be very fascinating. Can but see my packages wrapped and tied. Finde here package of tags and stickers to match at 15c. Address tags, too, all decorated in seasonal design. 'Tis a pleasure to stroll within Diggon's for here be so many fine new suggestions for all.

Could not resist an hour with the Period Arts, at Government Street. Browning about among the perfect bits that do reflect the best of makers' art, can but think upon my allowance. Would Samuel had but doubted it. Come upon a cocktail set of finest glassware. So fragile, yet so strong within its plain design. Rising from the clear glass, frosted bubbles catch the imagination and make one visualize some happy toast within the rim. This fine set doth stand upon a hand-made copper tray. What perfect gift for those who ever wish for something different.

Finde the shadows lengthen as I do finally leave the Period Arts Shoppe. Turn home a ward with many happy thoughts. Wee Jock doth run to meet me at the gate and together we go on to greet Samuel, waiting within the doorway. 'Tis pleasant to come thus... to home at eventide.

The GOLDEN FEATHER QUINTUPLETS TO BE FILMED

CHAPTER I

A good-looking girl, with maize-yellow hair and eyes that haven't looked at the world long enough to know how seamy its underside can be, looks up from her table in a night club... she's thrilled to death to be there and she thinks she's being just a little bit wicked, in a perfectly nice way... she looks up from her table and smiles at the sandy-haired chap who is beaming down at her, and she says, "How do you do, Mr. Har-kin?"

A clerk in an airy Washington office jabs a green drawer out of a ceiling-high filing cabinet, ruffles through it with practiced fingers, and draws out a card. On the card there is a man's picture, along with ten ink smudges and a half a dozen lines of type; and pinned to it is a smaller card, colored red, with the word "Wanted" on it in big black letters...

A big automobile stops in a lane by the veranda of a western ranch house, and a hard-faced man sticks his head out of the front window, and a broad-shouldered youth gets up from the veranda steps and says, "Okay, Joe," and puts himself and his suitcase into the car, and it spins off to the northeast over the rolling, treeless hills where the famous badmen of the west used to have their hide-outs.

A tall, worried-looking man sits at a desk in a Chicago doctor's office. The telephone jangles; he answers, says "Yeah... yeah... I'll be right over," and takes a last furtive look around the place before he locks up and goes out.

A man in a Chicago apartment writes down a phone number on the varnished woodwork over a closet door... An ambitious youngster fresh out of college sells a big sedan to a well-dressed stranger, and goes home "congratulating" himself, trying to figure how soon he'll have enough money to get married... A politician grins as his visitor shuts the office door behind him, and puts a fat sheet of bonds into his safe.

A "hard-boiled" detective drinks a glass of beer and says to his friend, "Yeah, Bill, it's like this—the big lug's got in in down at city hall." And four very tough-looking gentlemen walk into a small-town bank in the middle west, swing out muskets menacingly, and walk out presently with a small fortune in cash and securities.

So what? So it's all part of the panorama, and it all makes sense if you string it together right. It makes sense because some people are foolish and some people are down-right bad and some other people are both wise and good, and out of it all you can get a new slant on your America, and perhaps a new pride in it, and a new understanding of what is going on in it.

We'll start with the girl in the night club.

Jean Dunn smiled at Bobby in the Golden Feather night club, saying to herself, "That man is kind of good-looking, and he's been watching me ever since I came in. I wonder who he is?"

Blissfully ignorant of this, Bobby Wallace—who was not the good-looking man she referred to—looked at her and picked up the conversation which the general stir incident to the end of the last dance had interrupted.

"Listen, Jean, I mean it," he said. "You don't want to live in a city all your life. Wouldn't it be more fun—I mean, even if we didn't have such an awful lot, just at first—aw, Jean, honey, say you'll marry me!"

He leaned toward her, and his honest, stub-nosed face, was very earnest. Jean put the good-looking stranger out of her head and reached across to pat Bobby's hand.

"Bobby, I like you a lot," she said. "You're just a peach. But can't you see my side of it? We're both of us so young. There's so much to do, and so much to see, before we get respectable and settle down. I'm spoiled, I guess, but I don't want to be just a housewife just yet. I want—oh, Bobby, I want to play. I've only been away from home for six months. I like being on my own. I like being independent. Don't you see I want to enjoy it a while?"

Bobby sighed.

"You're in college for four years," he protested.

"Yes, and if you call that being independent, you're crazy," she retorted. "I mean being out on my own, earning my own living and all. Don't you see?"

"But we could get the nearest apartment," said Bobby, as if that answered her objections. "Regular little parlor-bedroom-and-bath arrangement, and you wouldn't be tied down. Why, you'd be more independent than you are now. You'd be more your own boss. You wouldn't have to trot down to an old office every morning. And pretty soon we could buy one of those new sport roadsters, and go—"

"Pretty soon," said Jean. "Bobby, dear, I don't want to hurt your feelings, but I'm just not one of these nice home bodies that can start on a shoestring. It's not as if I—she paused, trying to pick her words tactfully—"Bobby, if you were on a regular salary it might be different. But you know yourself that selling autos is awfully irregular. One month we'd be flush, and the next one we'd be living on salmon and crackers. The strain'd be too much for me. I guess I'm pretty selfish," she finished apologetically.

"No, no," said Bobby hastily. Then he said, "You mean—if I suppose if I had a nest egg laid away—say a couple of thousand dollars—you look at things differently?"

She smiled at him, and Bobby reflected irritably that no girl with long drooping eyelashes ought to smile at a man in that way unless she wants to be kissed.

"You make me sound like a cheap little gold-digger," Bobby, she said. "But would you?" he persisted.

"Bobby," she said, "I like you better than any man I know or ever have known. I'd marry you tomorrow, only I'm not ready to marry anybody yet. And then—please don't be hurt, Bobby—I do think that if we did get married, we ought to be better prepared financially."

Then, pursued Bobby, "If I can lay away $2,000, will you marry me?" She smiled at him with the fondness of a friendship that extended back to childhood, and she reflected that it would take Bobby, the newly launched salesman, a very long time to lay away any part of $2,000.

"You do it, and then come and see me," she said, laughing. "Listen, the music's starting again. Let's dance."

CHAPTER II

As Bobby pushed the chair back, they realized that two men had come up to their table. One of them was Art Lanning, the proprietor of the Golden Feather night club. He wore a dinner jacket, had dazlingly sleek black hair brushed back from a pale forehead, and he seemed just a little bit too affable and suave to be entirely reliable; but then, Jean told herself, he must be all right, for hadn't her own boss introduced him to her?

Lanning's companion, she realized with a little startled thrill, was the good-looking young man who had been so noticeably watching her from his table on the other side of the room. He was tall, and broad-shouldered, and although he wore his tuxedo as if he were used to it, he seemed to have an awkward air about him, as if he belonged on the western plains somewhere instead of in this stuffy, overcrowded night club. Perhaps it was his hair that did it. It was sandy, and it refused to lie down in the well-trained manner of Lanning's, instead, a long forelock dropped down over his forehead, making him look like a cowboy who had got used to the city but who, nevertheless, intended to go back to the range some day.

"ELIJAH" WILL BE GIVEN SOON

Well-known Oratorio by Mendelssohn to Be Presented at First United Music lovers will have the opportunity of hearing one of the favorite sacred oratorios on December 10 when the combined First United Church and Orpheus Choirs will render Mendelssohn's "Elijah" in the First United Church of this city.

On account of its fine dramatic nature and numerous opportunities for choral effects the "Elijah" has become one of the most frequently performed works.

The history of such work is rather interesting. In 1835 the Birmingham Musical Festival committee was on the lookout for a new oratorio for their annual festival, and Mendelssohn was asked if he would act as conductor and write a new choral work. Mendelssohn had a great friend, Pastor Schubring and these two collaborated regarding suitable texts for the "Elijah." The first performance took place in the Birmingham Town Hall when no less than four choruses and four airs were enclosed by a large audience. James Stimpson, organist of the Birmingham Town Hall, acted as chorus master, and Dr. H. J. Gauntlett played the organ. According to all reports the performance was complete triumph. This year in the Royal Albert Hall Mendelssohn's "Elijah" was dramatised when 2,000 performers took part.

Mark Daniels will take the part of "Elijah" at the forthcoming performance. Mr. Daniels is one of the outstanding soloists of the Pacific Coast. Mrs. Florence Beeler of Seattle will be the contralto, Leonard Hayman of Vancouver the tenor and Mrs. W. H. Wilson of this city the soprano. The organ will be Frederick J. Chubb, Christ Church Cathedral, Vancouver. Tickets are now ready, and may be had from members of the chorus or from Fletcher Bros., Willis Piano Co., Little & Taylor and the Belmont Coffee Shop.

Your Baby and Mine

By MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

All mothers, naturally eager to see their children thrive and gain weight, are given to making increases in new foods too rapidly. They offer a new food in a day or so begin to feed in amounts which seem to them to be satisfying. But to tax the baby's digestion with an unfamiliar food is quite often the swift road to a digestive upheaval which makes it necessary to withdraw the food entirely or else to offer it in the most minute amounts.

It is quite common for the introduction of even one spoonful of a new food to be followed by some evidences of indigestion. The baby may pass a loose or imperfectly digested stool, or spit up a little, or develop a slight rash.

BE CAUTION! But, if the new food is given regularly in these small portions, the baby becomes adjusted to it. Then and only then, it is advisable to increase the amount by another cautious spoonful and continue this procedure until the baby is getting the new food in appreciable amounts.

Our leaflet, "Additional Foods for the First Year," will give the mother a definite idea of what new foods to offer, the amounts with which to start and the probable steps in increasing them. It may be had for a self-addressed and three-cent stamped envelope sent to Myrtle Meyer Eldred of the "Your Baby and Mine" department of this newspaper.

CHANGE FORMULAS GRADUALLY These warnings apply equally to the strengthening of the milk formula. Right before me is the letter of a mother who inadvertently starved her baby for several weeks and then began a full-strength milk formula. The result was that taken baby developed a rash and passed eighteen stools in one day. The diet had to be stopped, the baby put on a weak, almost water diet, and then the formula begun again in a greatly weakened form.

It is much better, when introducing or changing a formula, to disregard baby's immediate gain and be certain that baby can digest the formula without colic or loose stools. Then, when the digestion has accommodated itself to the new food and the baby is showing some signs of hunger and satisfaction, the formula may again be strengthened. By such methods adjustments to new foods can be accomplished without difficulty and the gain will take care of itself.

the energy that the human being will use.

TO-DAY'S HEALTH QUESTIONS Q—Why are some people short and others tall? How can I increase my height?

A—Apparently the size of most people is governed by their heredity. People who come from tall families are likely to be tall, and vice versa. The factors which regulate growth are in the glands, and the glands are part of the constitution that is inherited at birth. Certain diseases, however, interfere with growth of the long bones. Rickets does this. Use of vitamin D preparations, and plenty of calcium and phosphorus will overcome rickets.

Victoria Alderman Entertains Pioneer Married Couples

Nanaimo, Nov. 22.—Alderman James Adam of Victoria was host at a golden wedding party yesterday evening. Mrs. Adam was married to her husband, Mr. Adam, on Nov. 22, 1860. The party was held at the Victoria Hotel and was attended by twenty couples, all Nanaimo residents, all having been married here fifty years ago or more. Mr. Adam has always kept in touch with pioneer residents here. Some time ago he issued an invitation to all in the district who had been married for fifty years to gather at a banquet at the Malaspina Hotel as his guests.

All invitations were accepted, and following two hours at the banquet, the party adjourned to the Capitol Theatre, where they were the guests of the management. ### 1936 OLDSMOBILES HAVE MANY REFINEMENTS

SCORES OF IMPROVEMENTS ENGINEERED INTO SIXES AND EIGHTS—Oldsmobile for 1936 retains a strong hold on style leadership with the new models just announced. Above, the eight-cylinder rumble-seat coupe, well illustrating the new front-end effect obtained by the rounder radiator grille, high-mounted headlamps, and louvre treatment. Below, the six-cylinder coach, with trunk. Many new refinements of motor, body, and chassis, have been built into the 1936 Oldsmobiles.

Twenty-five Years Ago To-day

(From The Times Files)

A native daughter, Miss Alma Victoria Clarke showed herself to be a pianist of great talent and excellent promise in the course of a recital which was held last evening at Government House.

Another civic project of considerable magnitude was authorized at last evening's meeting of the City Council. This is the widening of Douglas Street between Humboldt and Superior Streets in conformity with other sections of that artery.

Conductor Gideon Hicks of the Choral Society was delighted on Saturday night to find such a response on the part of the members of the chorus to his request for extra practices on that night and next Saturday.

A. P. Luxton, K.C. headed a deputation of Fort Street property owners who last evening waited on the City Council and urged that the work of widening that thoroughfare from Douglas to Cook Street be proceeded with immediately.

A cable to the Department of Agriculture states that out of nine Old Country fairs at which British Columbia fruit has already been exhibited it has won seven gold and two silver medals, the highest aggregate any district or province has achieved in a similar number of shows.

DEAN CLEMENT AT LANGFORD

The "Changing Economic Pattern" Subject of U.B.C. Professor's Address

Langford, Nov. 22.—Dean F. M. Clements of the University of British Columbia addressed a meeting in the Women's Institute Hall Wednesday evening on adult education.

Mrs. D. B. P. Bullen presided.

Dean Clements spoke on the "Changing Economic Pattern," stressing the effect these changes have had on Canada's wheat surplus.

England, he pointed out, had changed over from a free trade country to protection, and was now housing her farmers, especially in wheat, the first 30,000,000 bushels grown there being guaranteed a price of $1.25 a bushel.

He then grouped France, Germany and Italy, all of whom either bonus or compel their farmers to grow wheat or engage in whatever line of farming the authorities think desirable.

He grouped the Danube Basin countries that have increased wheat production and market it co-operatively under the Danube agrarian commonwealth.

Dean Clements did not think that the wheat-growing countries have much to fear from Russia's surplus. He suggested that "the heart and soul had been taken out of Russia" that many of their vast schemes of agriculture had been failures. They had tried to establish agriculture on factory lines and, particularly in the case of livestock this did not work well.

Whereas Canada was built up on her export of natural products, it was becoming increasingly difficult to obtain markets. There is now no further west for the young Canadian to go to, and he urged that they should try and get themselves out and work out their own salvation. He believed there were opportunities in western Canada but they required effort to find them.

Salvationists Assist Needy

Appeal to Public for Help to Carry on Relief Work

The Salvation Army, with relief headquarters at 525 Johnson Street, is doing its best to assist needy persons. Major R. Fullerton, relief officer, states they are very much in need of assistance at the present time. The Army is endeavoring to help furnish the homes of two large families who are asking the Salvation Army for beds, mattresses, stoves and warm clothing. The appeal is an urgent one, and any generous friend who can donate clothing, shoes, furniture or bedding is requested to phone Garden 7612.

Major Fullerton remarks that E. G. Snowden, city relief officer, recently referred to the city relief agency as the only agency which was giving out used clothing.

"Mr. Snowden meant to have said it was the only agency doing this work with the exception of the Salvation Army. The Army has always carried on relief work and tried to better the more unfortunate in so many ways and hopes it always will do so when and where the need is forthcoming."

The following statement shows what has been accomplished within the last twelve months:

More than 2,000 received assistance; 583 families were given help; last Christmas, 300 children were given toys; 715 persons were given free clothing; 2,215 garments given away; 103 pieces of furniture given to needy families; 2,670 free beds to men out of employment; 2,188 meals to hungry men; dirty stained men assisted with beds, meals and clothing and some employment.

Major Fullerton thanks the citizens and friends for their generosity in the past and asks that they continue to give the work of the Salvation Army their support.

Roosevelt May Visit Canada

Invited By Premier King. But As Yet Plans Have Not Crystallized

Associated Press
Washington, Nov. 22.—A visit to Canada—and possibly some game fishing—there is one of President Roosevelt's hopes for the future.

But he emphasizes that he has made no plans for the trip and that as far as he knows now, it still is just a hope.

The President disclosed his ambition at a press conference when his attention was called to reports that he had accepted an invitation from Prime Minister King to visit him in Canada. Mr. King was an overnight guest of the President at the White House during negotiations over the Canadian-United States trade agreement.

Mr. Roosevelt said he had wanted to go to Canada, but saw no immediate chance of being able to do so. When told of reports that he was expected to fish for tuna in Canadian waters, he smiled and said he hoped they would come true.

Three Upsets Are Marked Up In Major Hockey Battles

THE SPORTS MIRROR

DID YOU KNOW that Eddie Oatman and Oles Hart, two hockey players who were closely associated with the pro sport in Victoria, are coaching amateur clubs this season in Saskatchewan? Yorkton has hired Oatman to do the coaching off from the bench, which should be a particular boost to the Terriers for a man with Oatman's experience can do the youngsters nothing but good. Hart, who turned out a finished product at Weyburn last winter, is back on the job again. Both men reached hockey's heights while sporting the colors of Victoria teams. Memories of their feats in the western Canada League are vividly recalled by those who followed the teams a few years back.

Saskatchewan amateur teams this season boast some of the finest coaching in Canada. In Regina there is a wealth of coaching talent. Foss Traub, one of the finest of all defensive players, saw all there was to see in big time hockey and now helps his old boss, Wes Champ, with an amateur club. Duke Dutkowski, who did plenty of travelling around the National Hockey League, is coaching the Regina Vics. Go to Prince Albert and you will find Art Somers, quite recently of New York Rangers, shouting orders to the Minto as they go through their workouts. And if any team runs short of a coach, Hec Fowler is available at Saskatoon. Fowler is another player who saw service with Victoria.

Trevor Wignall, columnist of The London Daily Express, does not consider the present New Zealand All-Blacks one-two with the fifteens that visited England in 1935 and 1934. Here is what the English writer has to say of the present squad: "I regret to say on the form they have exhibited they are not to be compared to the predecessors. The New Zealand sides of 1935 and 1934 could give the present tourists 100 points and a kicking. Their packing is clumsy and ill-contrived. There is rarely a possibility of a scrum being heeled successfully. It is not the forwards but the formation. The sooner they scrap this English style the better. What I particularly missed were the short, snappy passes of former New Zealand teams, the powerful runs down the centre and the swift heeling of the forwards. There was far too much kicking. . . in touch."

This month's issue of the Baseball Magazine contains its annual All-American club. It is a full quarter since the magazine and since that time countless others have seized on the idea. Through the years the Baseball Magazine has been guided in its choice mainly by the opinions of the players themselves.

Here is the selection by Greenberg (A.), second base, Gehring (A.), short stop, Vaughan (N.); third base, Martin (N.); right field, Ott (N.); centre field, Berger (N.); left field, Medwick (N.); catcher, Cochran (A.). Pitchers selected are: Jerome Dean (N.), Ferrell (A.), Hubbell (N.), and Bridges (A.).

That's a formidable looking gang of ball players and a collection which many a manager would give his right arm to possess. Whether they would perform collectively as well as they have individually with their clubs, is a moot point, and one which will never be settled.

All things being equal it would be a difficult job to select a more powerful aggregation based on past season's records. Taking the players (exclusive of pitchers) as listed in the order above, their batting averages are given as: Martin .385, 399, 322, 395, 353, 326, 299, 285, 299, 322, 395, 353, 326. Pitching percentages give Dean .320, a mark of .700, Ferrell .641, Hubbell .657, and Bridges .677.

The opening game at 7 o'clock will bring together Commercial and Christ Church Cathedral, junior equads.

Oak Bay Merchants oppose Silent Glows in an intermediate fixture.

Mount View Wins School Football

Mount View gave a fine exhibition of teamwork and the Victoria boys could not do much against their long passing.

E. Harris scored the first goal early in the first half. Harris netted the second goal half way through the second half.

Victoria played with ten men. Hubert Cumberbirch refereed. The teams follow:
Mount View—C. Sedger, G. Cooper and J. Robinson; D. Kennedy, E. DeCosta and D. Arceman; E. Harris, A. Simpson, J. Stewart, C. Pecknold and B. McCall.

Victoria High—D. Drummond, C. Miller and R. Bishop; N. Brown, R. Williams and C. Holt; T. Ord, L. Walters, R. Cosier and B. Roe.

Sydney, N.S.W., Nov. 22.—The touring M.C.C. opened a four-day cricket match against New South Wales to-day. Batting first the visitors scored 280 runs, Harris obtaining seventy-seven and Parks fifty-five. When stumps were drawn for the day New South Wales had made twenty-nine for no wickets.

Paul Thompson Scoring Star in 4 to 3 Triumph; Canadiens Halt Maroons

DETROIT FALLS BEFORE AMERKS

By ELMER DULMAGE
Young men from the west stood in command to-day along the National Hockey League front, having completed a triple play in Chicago, New York and Montreal in the first series of distinct upsets to mark this young campaign. The Alberta influence, in particular, made itself felt in yesterday evening's games.

Especially forceful was the performance of Paul Thompson, Calgary, in Chicago's 4 to 3 triumph over Toronto Maple Leafs. The Alberta, one of the best left wingers in the business, had a hand in all four goals and scored two of them himself for the Hawks, which is the west's favorite big league team.

Sweeney Schirner, dazzling left-wing sophomore of New York Americans, also from Calgary, fired two overtime goals to give the New Yorkers their first victory of the season at the expense of Detroit Red Wings. The score was 3 to 1.

CUDE SPECTACULAR
Just to make it a general western celebration, Leroy Goldworthy from Edmonton staged a one-man uprising against Montreal Maroons, bagging both goals in a 2 to 1 victory for Canadians over the Stanley Cup winners.

Wilt Cude played a spectacular game in the French goal before and after he suffered two broken ribs in the third period. Cude is from Winnipeg. It developed, as Clem Loughlin's Black Hawks handed Toronto its first defeat of the season, that Chicago boasts one of the best forward lines in hockey when Thompson, Doc Romnes and Donny McPadden are together. They have figured in every Chicago goal this season.

McPadden scored within three minutes of the season, that Chicago of Alex Levinsky. A few seconds Thompson whipped in the second himself and Nick Metz scored for the Leafs before the first period ended.

It was goal-for-goal the rest of the way. Harvey Jackson scored twice on Joe Primeau, but Romnes scored one and Thompson another.

Traveling by air and staying as he did last year, Schirner bobbed up suddenly in the overtime period to prevent Detroit from recording its fourth consecutive tie. The Wings were well on the way to achieving this unique mark. There was one little more than two minutes to play in the extra session at New York and the score was 1 to 1.

The Schirner broke away with Art Chapman and started with the help of Alex Levinsky. A few seconds later the Calgary boy trapped the Wings during a gang raid and broke away for another goal.

CANADIENS RALLY
Tommy Gorman's Maroons, making their second start of the season, stumbled on the western combination of Goldworthy and Cude after getting an early lead. Gus Marker sent the big red team away fast with an early first-period goal, but the flying Goldworthy erased that margin before the session ended.

In the third period Goldworthy raced from end to end on a solo rush to drive the Winnipeg past Goble Bill Beveridge. Cude was injured in the last minute of the game when Hootie Smith crashed into the little netman. He will be out of the game a week or two and Canadiens may replace him with either Bill Taucher, Cleveland, or Abbie Cox, Springfield.

Teams and summaries follow:
Toronto—Hainsworth, Day, Glancy, Primeau, Conacher, H. Jackson, Hollett, Blair, Bell, Finnigan, Thomas, Kelly, A. Jackson and Metz.
Chicago—Karakas, Wiebe, Levinsky, Romnes, McPadden, Thompson, Morens, Burke, March, Gotselieg, Locking, Trudell, Cook, Ouellette and Coulter.

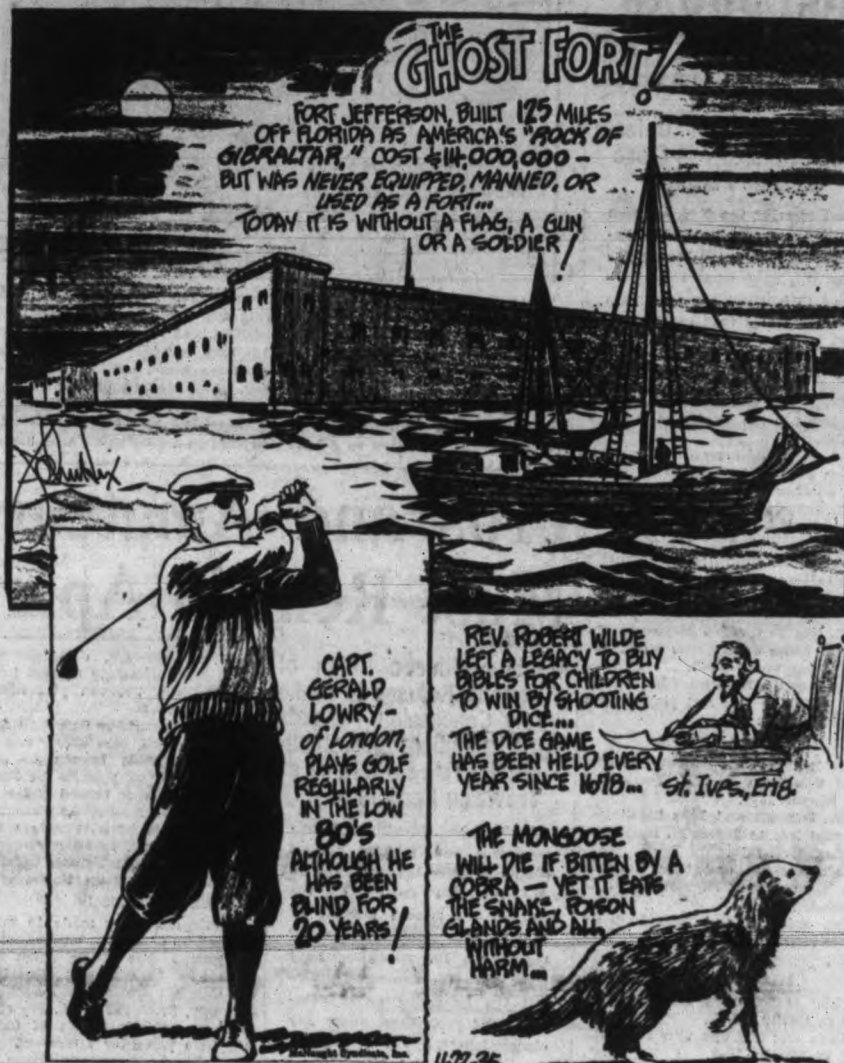

Officials—Dye and Daigneault.
SUMMARY
First period—1, Chicago, McPadden (Levin); 2 to 0, Toronto, 240; 2, Chicago, Thompson (McPadden-Romnes), 11:50; 3, Toronto, Metz (Holt), 18:50. Penalties—H. Jackson, Bill Trudell, A. Jackson.

Second period—4, Chicago, Doc Romnes (Thompson-McPadden), 50; 5, Toronto, H. Jackson (Conacher), 2:30; 6, Chicago, Thompson (Romnes), 12:10. Penalties—Morens, McPadden, 13:10.

Third period—1, Chicago, 16:20. (Tura to Page 17, Col. 6)

STRANGE AS IT SEEMS

—By John Hix

Fort Jefferson, nicknamed "Fort Polly," is to-day a forgotten and ill-considered venture of fortifying the entrance to the Gulf of Mexico. Built, built and abandoned, the old fort now stands like a ghost town of gold-rush days on Dry Tortugas Island, 125 miles off the coast of Florida.

It was started in 1846 as the Rock of Gibraltar of the Gulf, to give the United States control over those waters. Five hundred guns were planned in three tiers, and the fort was to cover sixteen acres of ground. Fourteen years and $14,000,000 went into the fort before construction was halted.

The idea was almost abandoned and the plan was dropped. During the Civil War, the old fort was used as a prison. In the Spanish-American War about $800,000 was spent by the navy in repairs, but Fort Jefferson was not used. It lay forgotten until the World War, when at last it became useful—lead was stripped from window casements and salvaged for munitions manufacture.

Every year in St. Ives, Huntingdonshire, England, twelve boys and girls gather at the council schoolhouse to shoot a game of dice—and Bibles. Strange as it seems, are given to the winners. Instructions for this strange ceremony, together with a legacy to buy the Bibles given to winners, were in the will of the Rev. Dr. Robert Wilde, who died in 1878. Dr. Wilde's will has not been followed to the letter—he instructed that the dice be rolled on the communion table, but in 1860 church officials vetoed the idea and since then the game has been held in the schoolhouse.

To-morrow: Glenna Curtiss's Most Enduring Speed Record.

Bays-Wanderers Favored In Game

Team Expected to Take Second Place Rugby Honors With Victory Over Scots To-morrow; Navy to Play Garrison Again; Three Other Games

It looked to-day as if the Bays-Wanderers were headed for second slot in the Victoria senior rugby league's first-half ratings to-morrow when they will stack up against the tail-end Canadian Scottish in one of two games billed at Macdonald Park. In the other half of the bargain bill, the Navy will be largely favored to trim the Garrison.

Three other regular matches, including a senior B game between the Navy and Garrison at Admirals Road at 1.30 o'clock, and two intermediate fixtures, will complete the programme for the day. In the latter division Wanderers Whites and Wanderers Blues will meet in their intralug duel at Oak Bay Park, while Victoria College and the Fifth Brigade clash at the High School grounds. With the exception of the senior B fixture, all games will start at 3 o'clock.

REFERENCES NAMED
In the senior division, Benny MacMillan will handle the Navy-Garrison engagement and C. E. Ley will look after the Scots-Bays-Wanderers encounter. Dan Moses will referee the senior B fixture, while Aubrey Walls will be in charge of the all-Wanderers intermediate duel and Alan Le Marquand the College-Fifth battle.

On Sunday, Cowichan will play the Navy at the Naval Recreation grounds, Admirals Road, at 2.30 o'clock with Le Marquand blowing the whistle. Provided they live up to expectations and take the measure of the Scottish, the Bays-Wanderers will owe their position in second place in the senior division to a smart side line conversion scored by Ronnie McCann in one of the first games of the year. It was the former leader of the club's intermediate champions who put the ball between the bars when the Bays-Wanderers beat the Navy in one of the closest games of the season to date.

In the other game, the greater cohesion of the Navy's attack should more than offset the ruggedness of the Garrison's play. When the teams last met, the Navy had a lead over the Bays-Wanderers. Aubrey Walls called the game on account of mounting friction between players and the union declared the fixture no contest. Some line-ups for to-morrow's fixtures follow:

Bays-Wanderers—Hartley, Luttrell, Synnott, Oaman, Neill, McCann, Burgess, F. Briggs, Pettigrew, Harman, A. Briggs, Drummond, Tobin, Burns and Moore.

Wanderers "Whites"—Yates, Gornall, H. Brown, Parker, Grogan, Hillebrand, Fisher, Kennedy, Murray, Murdoch, Shepherd, Fraser, B. Brown and Cook.

Players on the latter team are requested to be at the clubhouse at 2.45 o'clock.

Fifth Intermediates—Russell, Bray, Saunders, Dainton, Pellett, Gower, McGarry, Dunaway, Ferguson, McDonald, Smith, Bridge, Winsby, Coster, Doherty, Patt, Stub's, Langdon and Bishop. Players to meet at the Armory at 2 o'clock.

Wanderers Blues—McGregor, Page, Langton, G. Clarke, Gray, Murdoch, Ley, Barnes, Horne, Quate, McKay, H. Clarke, Barber, Armour and McDonald.

PORTLAND IN FIRST PLACE

Defeat Seattle 4 to 1 to Take Over Lead in Northwest Hockey League

Portland, Nov. 22.—Portland Buckaroos moved into the leadership of the Northwest Hockey League to-day over the idle Vancouver Lions as they counted a 4 to 1 victory over Seattle Sea Hawks, cellar occupants, here yesterday evening.

Led by young Jimmy Jemson and the flashy Walter McCartney, the Bucs collected lone goals in the first and third periods and a pair in the middle session, while the Sea Hawks could only garner a lone tally late in the final stanza.

Jemson snapped in the first Portland goal, after seventeen minutes of play in the initial period on a solo rush.

He passed to McCartney early in the second for Bucs' second counter, and Ralph Blythe made it three for Portland on Louis Couper's assist near the midway mark.

McCartney netted Portland's last goal after thirteen minutes in the third period on Red Hemmerling's pass.

Seattle broke into the scoring column a minute later when Johnny Sheppard drifted past the Portland defence and passed to Cam Proudlock, who flipped the disc into the Bucs' net.

Teams follow:
Seattle—Yenne; Houbregs, Gilhooly; J. Sheppard; Gagne, Proudlock, Subs—Mullen, Tabor, McAdams, F. Hemmerling.

Portland—Atkinson; Arbour, Sutherland; Jemson; McCartney, H. Hemmerling, Subs—Scott, Blyth, Lyon, Couper.

Dominion Will Send Team to Wimbledon Championships Again Next Year

Ottawa, Nov. 22.—Philip D. Lyons, president of the Canadian Lawn Tennis Association, said yesterday it was "extremely probable" another Canadian team would be sent to England next summer to compete in the Wimbledon tournament.

Other announcements made by Lyons were that Bob Murray, Montreal, would probably defend his Scotland singles title; a Scottish tennis team would be invited to Canada to compete in the Dominion championships and it was likely Canada would re-enter Davis Cup competition next year.

This year a Canadian tennis team composed of Caroline Deacon and Eleanor Young, Vancouver; Laird Watt, Montreal, and Murray went to England to compete in the Wimbledon championships and later to Scotland for that country's tournament. Who would comprise next year's team Lyons did not say.

TRADE WINDS DYING DOWN

Major Baseball Session Draws to Close With Deals Only in Making

Dayton, O., Nov. 22.—Baseball's trade winds, which have waited players from one club to another during the last twenty-four hours, dwindled to a mere zephyr to-day as the minor league meeting drew towards its close.

Deals were in the making, but most of them will be kept under wraps until the December 10 major league session in Chicago.

Rumors ran rampant. One, which no one could prove, but everyone believed, was that the American Association would meet, or had already met, Billy Evans' demand for a five-year contract at $15,000 per year, to take over the presidency of the circuit.

Another report, which seemed well grounded, had it that Lew Fonseca, the American League's promotional director, would become the new prey of the Pacific Coast League. El Bangerly resigned recently as the league's chief.

Wally Berger, slugging outfielder of the Boston Braves, was the centre of a lot of trade talk—and the big reason why numerous other swaps had not been consummated. Every club in the National League would like to add Berger to its roster. They are keeping all available talent on hand as trading material in case he is tossed on the market.

Manager Charley Grimm of the Chicago Cubs has looked everywhere for a starting pitcher. He tossed Fred Lindstrom, Chuck Klein, and Tom Stankiewicz, all outfielders, on the block, but found no takers.

At Simmons, Chicago White Sox gardener, seems headed for Detroit if manager Mickey Cochrane of the Tigers can talk owner Walter O. Briggs into putting up the necessary funds—somewhere under $100,000.

Gorge Vale Will Oppose Victoria

At the Victoria Golf Club on Sunday the home players will act as hosts to a team from the Gorge Vale Club for a Victoria District Golf League match. Starting at 9 a.m. H. H. Allen and Walter Newcombe, Gorge Vale, will meet Jimmy Todd and Goldwyn Terry. Five minutes later Frank Thomas and D. R. Cox will tee off against N. Thornton and Art Beasley.

Will Meet in Canadian Play-downs To-morrow As Scheduled

ACTION TAKEN ON BERRY CASE

Halifax, Nov. 22.—Protective suspensions imposed by the eastern Ontario branch of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada on every man who played in the Interprovincial Rugby Union this season and every player who took part in exhibition games against a Big Four team have been lifted, President W. A. Fry of the A.A.U. announced to-day.

His announcement came after night-long conferences with other A.A.U. officials, brought on by yesterday's decision of the Union's Ottawa branch to suspend all teams who played against Ottawa Rough Riders when they carried an alleged professional.

Roy Berry, star back from the United States, was asserted to be really Bohn Millard, formerly of Texas University.

FULL INQUIRY
Further investigation into his identity would be undertaken, President Fry declared to-day, and he said he had done his "duty" in warning all Union athletes not to compete with or against Ottawa until the club cleared itself. And he made it clear the suspensions of the other teams had been lifted only pending a full inquiry.

The ruling apparently meant Hamilton Tigers, Big Four champions, and Queens University, who played an exhibition game against Ottawa this season, would be able to meet to-morrow as scheduled in the first round of the Dominion playoffs. The suspension threatened to put both out of the running.

H. Gordon Young, secretary of the Union's eastern Ontario branch, announced the wholesale suspension yesterday. To-day Fry said, Young had assured him "the Ottawa players had no knowledge of any irregularities." It was in view of this assurance the ban was lifted.

JACK RUSSELL DEFEATS COX
Wins Main Event on Vancouver Mat Card; Rocky Brooks Is Pinned

Vancouver, Nov. 22.—Jack Russell, Evanston, Ill., hung up his third straight victory in as many starts on Vancouver mats yesterday evening when he flattened Ted "King Kong" Cox, Lodi, Cal., twice with body presses after the latter had taken a fall in their headliner event.

Russell, weighed 210 and Cox 240 pounds.

After a series of elbow-jabbing, the burly Cox laid Russell low with a body press but the former northwestern university grid star took the sting and deciding falls in the third and fourth rounds.

Brother Jonathan, 238, Salt Lake City, and Abe Coleman, 240, New York mat artist, split their semifinal bout with one fall each. The first went to Jonathan with a headlock in the second round but Coleman tied it up with drop kicks in the fifth session.

Jack Forsgren, 235, Vancouver, emerged the victor from his tussle with Ivan Mangano, 222, Russia. Forsgren took a fall in the fourth with a Boston crab and Mangano was unable to continue.

Rocky Brooks, 202, Victoria grappler, suffered a one-fall defeat at the hands of Jack Wagner, 208, Rhode Island, in a preliminary. Wagner took the fall in the second round with a full nelson.

RING ENEMIES—SICKBED PALS

These three fellows seem to be boon companions in this touching sickbed scene. But put them in the ring together, and they would be after each other with pistols, knives, sledge, and lances for the middle-weight crown. The fighter flat on his back is Teddy Yarosz, Monaca, Pa., ex-champion, who recently lost to Babe Risko, right, of Syracuse. Centre is Frankie Battaglia of Winnipeg, whose recent knockout of Paul Pirrone marked him as No. 1 challenger for Risko's title. Battaglia and Risko paid Yarosz a visit in a Philadelphia hospital after he had undergone an operation on a knee re-injured in a title battle with Babe.

Pros and Amateurs Must Remain Apart

Amateur Athletic Union of Canada Refuses to Make Any Concession Towards Intermingling; Basketball Refused Blanket Traveling Permits

Halifax, Nov. 22.—Diehard conservatives and tolerant liberals staged a bitter battle at yesterday evening's session of the forty-eighth annual meeting of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada as the governing body came to a decision not to permit the intermingling of amateurs and professionals under any circumstances.

A resolution, put before the meeting by the resolutions committee, to permit an amateur team to carry one professional from another sport, formed the ground of the dispute which lasted three hours. When the final vote was taken, however, after many amendments, delegates were found overwhelmingly against lowering the bars between professionals and amateurs.

Applications of the Canadian Amateur Basketball Association and the British Columbia branch to allow blanket traveling permits for Pacific Coast teams were turned down yesterday by the resolutions committee.

The blanket permits were sought to facilitate and speed arrangements of games between British Columbia and Washington State teams.

HOCKEY SITUATION
Efforts are being made to restore the line-up of Halifax Wolverines and so permit the 1935 Allan Cup champions to represent Canada at the Olympic Games in Berlin next February. President W. A. Fry of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada said here yesterday afternoon.

Officials were communicating with players whose departure left the Wolverines too weak for a championship team, said President Fry. He expected a decision would be reached when replies were received from the hockeyists concerned.

FARM CLUB PUCKSTERS BRING HOPE TO LESTER
Rambler's Iron Man Trio Relieve Patrick of Worries in Sensational Hockey Marathon in Two Leagues; Start to Resume Play Sunday

By GEORGE MAGUIRE
New York, Nov. 22.—Series of injuries to New York Ranger players has brought to light new candidates for the role of hockey's iron men.

When Joe Cooper (Joe Palooka to his team-mates), a rough and ready defenceman; Neil Colville, sniping center, and Phil Watson, as speedy a wingman as they come, took the ice Wednesday evening at Philadelphia in a Canadian-American league game between the Ramblers and Springfield Indians, the trio had set an enviable record in these days of three-minute changes in professional puck carrying.

When the young Ramblers heard the final whistle in Wednesday evening's tussle they noted, a bit groggily no doubt, that it was their fourth game in five nights. They played regular Canadian-American games last Saturday and Sunday nights, hopped over from Philadelphia Tuesday night to help out the Ranger Parent club, riddled through broken collarbones, dislocated shoulders and what not, and though a bit tired today were resting in preparation for ice battles Saturday night against Providence Reds and back with the Rangers at Madison Square Sunday night against the steam-bang Boston Bruins.

LESTER BEAMS
Lester Patrick, with a beaming smile lighting up his lean countenance, watched his young farm club buddies, who he believes some other players like Bobby Kirk, erstwhile Vancouver lion, or Alex Shibley, the flashy Winnipegger, can do as well as the iron-man trio, he may give one or both a chance in the big time against the Bruins.

Patrick expects to have Hal Starr, the wallowing Ottawa, back on his range before Sunday, but it is unlikely Ott Heller or Bert Connolly will be ready for the National League wars for a couple of weeks. Heller has a broken collarbone and Connolly a bruised bone in the right arm.

Cooper, from Winnipeg; Colville, from Edmonton, and Watson, from last season's Montreal Royals, made a splendid impression on Patrick in their major league debut against Detroit Redwings Tuesday and chased from his face the worried frowns brought forth by injuries and the marathon holdout being staged by Earl Selbert, ex defenceman.

Detroit Olympics Win Three in Row
Detroit, Nov. 22.—Two goals and an assist in four games is, it must be admitted, a fairly creditable record for a youngster just breaking into professional hockey.

When Detroit Olympics defeated Cleveland Falcons, 3 to 0, in an I.H.L. fixture here yesterday evening, Carl Liscombe, a rookie from Hamilton, Ont., popped in the first goal, assisted in the second and boosted his point-total to three, an average of almost one a game.

Olympics' victory was their third straight and it increased their margin over Windsor Bull Dogs to two at the top of the western division.

Regina Awarded A.A.U. Session

Halifax, Nov. 22.—Regina was chosen to-day as the convention city for the next annual meeting of the Amateur Athletic Union of Canada.

Delegates to this year's convention, in session here, selected the western centre in preference to Montreal and Calgary because it had withdrawn at the last meeting in favor of Halifax.

Hamilton, Ont., had an application in to-day but withdrew it.

JAMBOREE IS BIG SUCCESS

Spirit of Yukon Days Revived As Anglers Stage Klondike Night

Memories of the fine old days of '98 were revived yesterday evening when a bumper crowd of 500 anglers flocked to the Chamber of Commerce Auditorium to take part in the Klondike Night staged by the Victoria and Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association.

It was a most impressive sight with well-known and notorious characters officiating at the various games of chance; and thus aided in making the atmosphere resemble that of a saloon of the gay nineties.

"Goopy Smith," with his long mustache and ever-ready cigar hanging from his mouth handled the "Turkey dice" game. Calamity Pete officiated at his own crap game.

Other well-known figures of the mining days were represented, these being "Dan McGrew," who walked the floor with a miniature cannon for a belt, and "The Woman Known As Lou," Dan McGrew's girl. Then of course there was Sam McGee, of Tennessee, where the cotton blooms and blows, and "Blossom," the boss of the gambling tables.

The following cries of the gamekeepers drew the merry crowd around their tables and prompted them to any line that would do justice to any old timer to "place" their money. The games which preceded included horse racing, roulette, fishing at Dog Fish Bay, wheel of fortune, crown and anchor, lucky dice and crap.

A number of vaudeville acts were also staged during the evening. Miss Betty Clair danced two numbers and Ernie Prentiss told a fish story and played the harmonica. The house was raised by phoney police, which turned out to be Slim Hunter and his gang. They finished their little act with a number of popular hill-billy songs.

MAYOR THANKS MEMBERS
Mayor David Leeming, number one member of the association, officially opened the affair. He congratulated the organization on its fine increased membership. His worship also thanked the members for their good work in promoting the fishing in Saanich Arm.

E. L. Tait acted as master of ceremonies and introduced those taking part in the affair. President R. J. O. Smith spoke briefly.

Mrs. Leila Colton won the drawing for a beautiful yellow-satin dress, while Mrs. P. Moore won the bean-guessing contest.

During the latter part of the evening Jerry Schofield and his orchestra rendered popular tunes for the dancers to wind up the programme at 12 o'clock.

The committee, which was under the chairmanship of Dr. Hugh Clarke, included William Halliday, Charlie Clark, Bill Rowe, N. Holyoak, J. B. Bartz and Boris Pettis.

Intercollegiate Team Brilliant

Several of Year's Greatest Players Included on Annual All-star Squad From Canadian Union; Number Must Be Rated For All-eastern Selection

Toronto, Nov. 22.—The question of whether college football players, even the best of them, are good enough for all-eastern rating hasn't cropped up in recent years until yesterday. The third annual Canadian Press all-star intercollegiate team brings some of the year's greatest players up for sectional recognition.

No longer have the Interprovincial and O.R.F.U. a lien on either back-field talent or wingline power in the east. College players, especially from the brilliant squads of University of Toronto and Queen's, take rank with the best in the other groups.

Intercollegiate all-stars follow: Snap—Meg Barker, Queen's. Flying wing—Harry Sonshine, Queen's.

Half—Hugh Marks, Toronto. Half—Johnny Munro, Queen's. Half—Joe Connelly, Toronto. Quarter—Bobby Coulter, Toronto.

Inside—Frank Veroni, Western. Inside—Bob Weil, Queen's. Middle—Abe Zevonkin, Queen's. Middle—Gus Croco, Toronto. Outside—Charles Letourneau, McGill.

Outside—Jack Holden, Toronto. Fortunes didn't change from Saturday to Saturday for this dazzling dozen as they did for some others whose all-star stock soared, then floundered. Herbie Westman, McGill star, unquestionably the best punter in college ranks, was an all-star certainty in mid-season. But towards the end of the campaign he was stopped.

Connelly, Munro, Coulter and Marks were never stopped. The powerful Sonshine stood out as a mighty defensive figure whether Queen's were winning or losing.

For sheer speed, the college offensive half line of Connelly, Coulter, Munro and Marks would be superior to any the Big Four or O.R.F.U. could muster. It would lack only the great plunging strength of the other passing line of the forward passing line of the forward passing line of the forward passing line.

When the experts go back in the huddle to name an all-eastern team, they will give serious consideration to this college backfield. The line is by long odds the best the intercollegiate has had available in years. Barker, formerly of Hamilton Tigers, is one of the best snappers in the east, yet he barely was named on the all-star team ahead of McGill's captain, Fred Wile.

SMALL SALARY PLEA REJECTED

Judge Refuses to Delay Foreclosure on Federal Government Employee

Mr. Justice Robertson of the Supreme Court today gave judgment rejecting the plea for delay made by Edgar Saxby Parr and giving Edward Davis and Anna Florence Davis leave to proceed to foreclosure on the residential property, Bee Street, Oak Bay.

Mr. Parr, who was listed in the court as a retired jeweler and surveyor by profession, made his plea against the foreclosure move on the grounds Mr. Parr was in receipt of a salary of only $40 a month.

He urged in court that the judge refuse leave to start the foreclosure proceedings under the discretionary provisions of the Mortgage and Foreclosure Act.

Mr. Justice Robertson, in his judgment today, however, refused Mr. Parr's salary plea and pointed out that Mr. and Mrs. Davis had been obliged to borrow on their life insurance policies to pay the interest on the property for 1932, 1933 and 1934 and to pay this year's taxes and insurance, and thus save the property from going to tax sale.

There does not appear to be any chance of sale of the property in the near future and in the meantime it is depreciating in value," the judge said.

In giving Mr. and Mrs. Davis and their counsel, H. W. Davey, leave to proceed, the judge pointed out that they would not get a final order for seven months and that Mr. Parr might, if he desired, apply before the final order to extend the time for redemption.

The Court of Revision on the Oak Bay voters' list will be held in the Municipal Hall on December 10.

School Method Draws Protest

In Peace River Three Out of Fifty-three Districts Oppose Consolidation

While the provincial government is as yet undecided of opposition in the Peace River area to the consolidation of school districts, news wires carried the report that three districts had threatened to go on a school strike and keep their children away after January 1 unless a satisfactory explanation is given by the government.

Parents in Baldonnel, Taylor and Peaceview districts held a meeting to protest the appointment of Dr. William Penderleith, former Victorian, as official trustee of the area.

In Vancouver, Hon. G. M. Weir, Minister of Education, stated the government would "examine the matter carefully and make any necessary adjustments."

At the Department of Education here, it was stated that while the protests were reported coming from only three districts, there were fifty-three school districts in the consolidation.

PROTEST MEETING
According to wire reports a meeting of the three districts voted to notify Premier Pattullo and the British Columbia Minister of Education and others, that "we shall cease to send our children to school and shall continue to keep them at home until our request is granted."

They also demanded removal of Dr. Penderleith "on account of his high-handed action in this matter and because he has failed in his duties as a school inspector."

A third resolution said the ratepayers of the three districts would refuse to have their books, records and accounts turned over to Dr. Penderleith until such time as the Department of Education "grants our requests."

The three school areas were consolidated within the block for taxation purposes with Dr. Penderleith directing the consolidated district and claiming an annual saving of $2,000 and increase of services. He also claimed that increases had been made to teachers' salaries and medical care given children.

The ratepayers, however, declared that the "new deal" had been forced upon them and that their wishes were "entirely ignored" and "treated with contempt."

Chairman A. R. Hadland observed that the ratepayers' stand should be "no representation, no taxation," but no resolution along this line was carried.

MINISTER'S ANSWERS
Questioned in Vancouver, Dr. Weir said the school districts in the Peace River area had been consolidated through the government by financial and administrative difficulties.

"We have had these complaints before, but they have always been ironed out," the minister said. "We are paying about 90 per cent of the teachers' salaries where consolidation has taken place and the result is better education and health services."

"Results have been very satisfactory. We have provided five public health nurses and a full-time doctor working in these districts and they have a free clinic. The plan is working to such good effect that it is actually costing the government less than under the former system."

MOVIE CAMERA GRINDS AGAIN

Spare Parts Here in Quick Time; Sound Defects Not As Large As Anticipated

Yesterday morning the cast and staff of "Stop, Look and Love," movie which is being made here by Central Films, had long faces.

To-day they are on top of the world again.

Wednesday was an unhappy day for the movie party. It saw the breaking of their only sound-proofed camera, one of their members involved in a car crash, and the receipt from Hollywood of a telegram saying most of the sound track they had made was no good.

At 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon Pilot Gordon McKenzie landed here with spare parts for the camera, the camera was at midnight Wednesday, and was transferred immediately to a plane in Seattle. It would have been here three hours earlier if the mail plane had not been delayed by fog.

Last night Kenneth Bishop, producer of the film, got good news from Hollywood. The message said that only some seventeen takes would have to be refilmed because of the sound track defects instead of seventy, as Mr. Bishop had at first expected.

In the early hours this morning the company was still hard at work outside the gates of the Willows grounds, the glaring Klieg lights providing an unusual spectacle for late passers-by.

To-day Victoria's forty-five extras, in their light summer clothes, are again on the lawn at Butchart's Gardens, where garden party scenes originally scheduled for Wednesday, and held up through the breaking of the camera, are being retaken.

United Church Leaders Here

Noted Pastors Will Give Four Addresses To-night and Sunday

At the same time Dr. Endicott, general secretary for foreign missions, will address a public meeting at Centennial United Church, Gorge Road and David Street.

The two meetings to-night will end at 9:30 o'clock, and will be followed by a round-table discussion by workers and the two speakers.

On Sunday morning at 11 o'clock Dr. Cochrane will speak at First United, Quadra and Pender Streets, and Dr. Endicott at Metropolitan United, Quadra Street and Pandora Avenue.

Christmas Seals To Fight T.B.

Kiwanis Club Starts Work on Christmas Campaign

Preparation for the annual distribution in Victoria, Oak Bay, Saanich and Esquimalt of one million Christmas seals, which has been under way for several weeks, went into high gear last evening.

A number of members of the Kiwanis Club of Victoria met at the showrooms of Thom. Plimley Ltd. and filled envelopes with letters and seals, to be ready for mailing on November 28.

Ten thousand letters will go out and the work of completing these for mailing will be continued each night, with the exception of Saturday, until finished.

This is the eighth year that the Kiwanis Club of Victoria has undertaken the work of distributing T.B. seals for the prevention of tuberculosis and the club is looking forward to a larger response than ever this year.

The United Church of Canada Young People's Union, under the able direction of Frederick H. Fullerton, will hold a drama contest of one-act plays in Vancouver on November 28, 29 and 30, in which twelve groups are entering plays. At the request of the Y.P.U. the Department of Education, in conjunction with the B.C. Drama Festival Association, has arranged for Major L. Bullock-Webster to act as an adjudicator. The latter, who was for several years producer of professional companies of Sir George Dance, and who got his training both in New York and London, is well qualified as an adjudicator, having had a lengthy experience with amateur dramatic work in Canada and the States. It is interesting to note that Major Bullock-Webster played the part of Lord Shrewsbury in the original London production of "La Toledad."

Hon. George S. Pearson, Minister of Labor, said "Reduce overtime and give competent unemployed a chance."

As part of a government campaign to check up on tax evasions among fishermen, eleven Indians have been prosecuted at Tofino, the Department of Fisheries said to-day. In five cases the accused Indians paid the tax and the other six went to jail.

They were charged with using purse seines without paying the tax, which is $25 a seine.

George J. Alexander, deputy commissioner of fisheries, said steps were being taken to check on all evasions of this kind

SPANISH PAIR TO DANCE HERE

Cansino and de Aragon Re- ceived Praise of San Francisco Press Recently

Marjory M. Fisher, writing recently in The San Francisco News, said of the Spanish dancers whom Violet
Wilson will bring to the Empire
Theatre the evening of Saturday,
November 30:

"The name of Cansino has long stood for Spanish dancing at its best.
Jose has both the background and the technique of the expert and artistry that matches his skill. He has a beautiful and immensely gifted dance partner in Tonia de Aragon. Tonia has a fine sense of musical values, a distinct flair for drama and a splendid command of dance idioms.
"There were dances of suavity and romance, a dance in the religious mood, beautifully done by Tonia, and three outstanding solo dances by Jose that showed his technical prowess in every conceivable phase. A tamborine dance popular in Madrid, with kicks taken at incredible speed; 'La Corrida,' with its extraordinarily rapid foot work, and the 'Fire Dance,' in which Jose's fingers, suggesting darts of flame, proved as agile as his feet and limbs."

OPERA WILL BE PRESENTED SOON

One of the most tuneful of twentieth century light operas is that of Oscar Straus, "The Chocolate Soldier," which will be produced at the Royal Victoria Theatre by the Victoria Civic Opera on December 5, 6 and 7.

With Basil Horsfall as director, this production should mark another step forward in the organization's bid for a permanent position in the entertainment field. There will be a chorus of seventy persons, and an augmented orchestra. All costumes will be done locally through the Women's Workroom, while the opera will be given its proper stage settings.

Those who saw "Lohengrin" know the high standard of the Victoria Civic Opera's talent, while those who failed to see last year's production of the newly-formed organization are advised not to miss "The Chocolate Soldier."

LOUIS ECKSTEIN DIES IN CHICAGO

Chicago, Nov. 22.—Death yesterday claimed Louis Eckstein, seventy, a director of the Metropolitan Opera Company, New York, and for more than twenty years the principal patron of summers at Racine, near here.

He died of pneumonia.
Eckstein spent a substantial part of his fortune sponsoring the "opera house of the woods," to which he brought world-famous voices. His friends estimated his contributions to the Racine Opera totaled $100,000.

He was born in Milwaukee, Wis.
Winnipeg, Nov. 22 (Canadian Press)—Six hundred chickens burned to death when fire of unknown origin destroyed the two-story plant of the Standard Produce Company here yesterday afternoon. The loss is estimated at $7,000.

"The Crusades" Starts To-morrow

The screen's new sensation is Cecil B. DeMille's "The Crusades," the great romantic spectacle which opens to-morrow at the Capitol Theatre, where it will play for six days. It is a mighty and a worthy successor to DeMille's "Cleopatra." It will, undoubtedly, be even more popular than that highly successful picture of last season.

"The Crusades" can be numbered among the great religious-historical romances produced by DeMille which include "The Ten Commandments,"
"The King of Kings" and "The Sign of the Cross." Like these three preceding pictures, "The Crusades" tell the story of supercharged conflicts in history arising at times of great crisis in the human race. The picture is set in the twelfth century, when all Christendom went on the inspired mission of rescuing the Holy Land, especially Jerusalem and the Holy Sepulchre, from the power of Islam.

spends in the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis before he is graduated as an ensign, but none is more impressive than the "Ring Dance" that celebrates his entrance into the second class.

In Dahlgren Hall, one of the academy's largest buildings, a gigantic ring stands in the centre of the floor, and through this each middle dancer with his sweetheart. Having passed through, the girl takes the boy's hand, places his clasping ring, with navy insignia, upon his finger, and kisses him.

The world at large will see this scene, for the first time, in the Co-mopolitan picture which comes to the Dominion Theatre to-day.

Dick Powell is the boy and Ruby Keeler is the girl. The scene was made at the academy at Annapolis during the 1935 graduation exercises, under the direction of Frank Borzage, who also made Powell's recent West

LITTLE ORPHEUM THEATRE
Five messenger boys and seventeen taxi drivers who had delivered hundreds of telegrams and hundreds of passengers to the gates of Hollywood studios without ever getting a glimpse of their favorite stars, finally had their chance when they turned actors for three days, on special leave from the telegraph and taxi companies, to appear in dock scenes depicting the sailing of a pleasure liner in Reli-ance's "Transatlantic Merry-go-round," released through United Artists and now at the Little Orpheum Theatre.

PLAYHOUSE THEATRE
Music of three great masters is heard in the symphonic selections which are used as a background for "Break of Hearts," a powerful love story which stars Katharine Hepburn and Charles Boyer, and which is now
atre.

Excerpts from Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony and Toccata, a Bach Fugue and the Prelude to Wagner's "The Meisteringer," is played during the picture by an eighty-five-piece symphonic orchestra composed of star musicians from practically every famous orchestra in the United States and Europe.

The music was picked to fit the mood of the scenes in which it is used and plays a vital part in the theme and action of the story.

COLUMBIA THEATRE
There is not a single actor or actress in the First National mystery drama, "While the Patient Slept," which comes to the Columbia Theatre to-day, who is not a graduate of the stage.

The players in the cast were all thoroughly schooled in the theatre before entering motion picture work, making this the largest all-stage cast in films.

This seems to be the answer to the query once voiced: "Now that talking pictures are here what will the screen do for players?"

NON-FICTION

B. "Marine Gunner" (Patrick Mee) is the self-told story of an adventurous life, from the time of the author's setting out from his Irish home in 1896 to go to look for work in Glasgow, his almost accidental enlistment, until his settling down in the Orkney Islands after the war. The author served over twenty-two years in the Royal Marine Artillery, so his autobiography is chiefly the daily life of a gunner in the navy, and he gives one many vivid incidents ashore and at sea, in peace and in war, that combine to make a very readable tale.

973.1. "Hereditry" (A. F. Shull) was written as a textbook for students who have had no previous training in biology. It will suit all seekers after a general knowledge of the subject of hereditry. To plunge from the start into the hereditry of man would be the broad changes that have occurred in the ever-varying boundaries of the European countries.

B. "Broken Record" (Roy Campbell). As the title implies, this is a book of reminiscences rather than a straightforward biography. The author himself says of it that it is "the record of an entirely selfish career, spent mostly in the sun, and in dreaming." Mr. Campbell has a curious and unusual view of his contemporaries, which makes the book of interest, but it will be chiefly read for the pleasure one will have in his style, which is the prose of a poet.

232. "Judaism, Christianity and Germany" (Cardinal M. Faulhaber). These sermons, delivered last Advent to Munich congregations which filled all available space, to overflowing exacted real courage of the man who read them from a pulpit which might at any moment have become the target of an assassin. Logical, orderly, practical, full of deep erudition, the sermons are characterized by passages of rare beauty and sublimity of expression. Three of them are concerned with the religious, social and ethical values of the Old Testament. The last address deals with the relations of Christianity to the German race.

581.5. "Economic Plants" (E. E. Stanford). Planned as a textbook, this work will be of interest to the general public who seek information regarding the economic uses of forest products, textile fibres, food products, oils, medicinal plants, and many others. It is written in a form well suited to the purposes of home economies.

306. "Leadership in a Changing World" (M. D. Hoffman) consists of selections from the writings of thirty modern writers, statesmen and sociologists, on different phases of modern social conditions. Each selection is introduced by a brief biographical sketch of the author. Nowhere in the volume is there any attempt to defend the status quo. Based on the evident process of change that involves modern society, the book presents a selection of intelligent points of view looking toward the future. The selections are temperate in tone and make their appeal to the reader's intelligence.

380. "Geography of Commodities" (H. Alnwick) is a fairly comprehensive work, covering all the important products of the world. The maps, one feels, could have been printed more clearly, but they are clear enough to indicate the fields covered by the various products discussed.

930. "The Ancient World" (T. R. Glover) is a brilliant historical survey of a long and interesting period from the days of Homer to those of Constantine; it is far more than a mere outline; for one thing, it brings out the immeasurable debt of the modern to the ancient world, for Greek thought, poetry and art, and Roman justice. It is written in a way that is apt to make the reader inquisitive about historical cause and effect, and make him anxious to read history for himself and discover his own solutions to his problems. The author stresses relationship of history and geography, physical conditions and trade movements. He makes frequent analogies between ancient and modern problems to prove his theory that all history is one.

B. "Thorstein Veblen and His America" (Joseph Dorfman). The value of this biography is historical and scientific rather than literary. The author has gathered material on the life of a most reticent and evasive personality from persons who knew Veblen as teacher, colleague and friend. The book offers evidence of patient research in a vast accumulation of facts, but they are poorly arranged, and the casual handling of them is not compensated for by a scattering of anecdotes illustrating the character of this sardonic and withal gentle inquisitor of society. Particularly interesting are the accounts of Veblen's early life in Minnesota and of his manners and methods of teaching.

Some readers may be interested in the addition of a few French books. The first two are fiction: "Le Vin de Solitude" (Irene Nemirovsky); "Remorques" (Roger Verce); 810. "Le Violon des Muses" (Tristan Dereme); and 844.08. "La Troisième République" (Jacques Bainville).

Other non-fiction books added recently are: 622.7, "Flotation" (A. M. Gaudin); 621.354, "Modern Storage Battery Practice" (A. D. Althouse); 812, "Collected Poems" (Cecil Day Lewis); 811.5, "Brown Earth and Bush Grass" (A. M. Stephen); 612.6, "Growing to Manhood" (R. E. Dickerson); and 811.51, "Victoria Poetry Chapbook, 1935." This is published by the Victoria and Islands branch of the Canadian Authors' Association.

Protection of Noteholders—Safeguarding the Deposits of the Citizens—Mobilizing Savings for the Encouragement of Agriculture and Industry—Assisting in the Development of External Trade.

CREDIT HAS NOT BEEN RESTRICTED

The Presidential Address of Mr. Jackson Dodds, Delivered at the Annual Meeting of the Canadian Bankers' Association:

It is usual for the president in his annual address to discuss the problems of the country, and of banking generally during the elapsed year. On this occasion I intend to depart from established custom and confine my remarks to the problems of the banks and their own business in particular. At the outset may I be permitted to express my appreciation of the loyalty of our customers during the past six difficult years. Had it not been for their unwavering confidence in the banks, their continued willingness to entrust their savings to us, their determination to turn a deaf ear to undesired criticisms, and their opposition to immature and unwise economic proposals, the banks might have been seriously crippled and would now in consequence be hampering instead of helping Canada along the road to recovery.

Bankers have maintained traditional silence long enough—too long, say some who have repeatedly urged us to reply to the adverse criticisms which have been current. Unwilling to be accused of "playing politics," we have curbed our impulses to tell what we have done on behalf of our customers.

As many newspaper editorials and letters in the press indicate, Canadians are realizing the unfairness of these attacks. This growing revulsion of feeling assures me that an effort to answer some of the critics of the policies which the banks have adopted for the protection of the public will be welcome.

Let me give a bird's-eye picture of the institutions in which depositors have chosen to place their savings. Ten banks operate some 2,924 branches and 608 sub-agencies in Canada, while about there are 147 branches and two sub-agencies to facilitate Canadian trade. Bank staffs comprise over 25,000 persons, of whom the executive officers, managers and many others are experienced professional bankers, carefully trained with a view to safeguarding the $2,554 millions of funds of 4,700,000 depositors, and loaning them to some 400,000 reliable borrowing customers, and investing them in the soundest of securities.

The activities of this army of employees, including the senior managerial officers, are constantly under the supervision of some 163 directors—able, sound, successful men of affairs, chosen from and by over 40,000 registered shareholders, whose average holdings are but twenty-nine shares. The true average is much smaller, because trust companies and many executors and trustees of estates cause a number of participants. These shareholders comprise men and women from every walk of life, whose investment, including premiums paid over the par value of their stock, and profits deliberately left in the banks over many years to strengthen the institutions, amounts to nearly 10 per cent of the banks' total assets of $5,696 millions, a substantial contribution of capital. Needless to state, these thousands of shareholders are not concentrated in the financial centres of Canada, but are scattered throughout the country.

HAVE PASSED ACID TEST
Thrice in the past six years have the banks been put to the acid test—the stock market crash of 1929, the abandonment of gold by Great Britain in 1931, the bank holiday in the United States in 1933. From all these they emerged with public confidence in them unshaken. The proven soundness of the banks under this triple onslaught was of incalculable value to Canada and to all Canadians during those days of stress and strain. The maintenance of the credit of Canada, its provinces, institutions and people during the past six unprecedented years has been aided in large measure by the strength and co-operation of the banks. A recent newspaper editorial, in opposing certain proposals to distribute other people's money and credit indiscriminately, bore this heading: "Shall we blow up our rock of Gibraltar?" Canadian bankers are grateful for such tributes, and with public endorsement of their policies as encouragement they will continue to "hold the fort."

In 1933 the Canadian banks came under the keen, critical eye of an eminent British banker, Sir Charles Addis, who, with the other members of the Royal Commission on Banking and Currency in Canada, under the chairmanship of Lord Macmillan, was charged with examining the provisions of the Bank Act and the functions and operations of the banking system. After traversing Canada from coast to coast, and taking some 2,500 pages of evidence comprising suggestions for improving the system and some complaints of its operation, the banks were called upon to reply. At the close of the final hearing Sir Charles Addis said:

"I am proud of my profession. You have been subjected to a searching questionnaire and you have given us a straight reply. You have refuted many ill-informed and I may add, in some cases, malicious charges which have been leveled at the banks. You have done so with a dignity with a moderation, and with a frank sincerity which compel conviction. I believe that your document will stand as an historical defence of the Canadian banking system. If this Commission should do nothing more than to elicit this response it would not, in my judgment, altogether have failed in the task allotted to it.

"We are now past the controversial stage. I have no questions to ask, or at least none which can be considered argumentative. The need for that has gone. Your papers have revealed to us a common aim. We have a common objective—the welfare of the people of Canada."

REVISION OF BANK ACT

Under our Canadian system the charters of the banks have been renewed for periods of ten years only, at the end of which the banks are required to appear before the Banking and Commerce Committee of the House of Commons at Ottawa to discuss any proposed changes in the Bank Act, as a condition precedent to the further extension of their charters. Last year I expressed the view that bank charters might well be made permanent, as in Great Britain, France and the United States; subject, however, to review of the Bank Act by Parliament at the end of each ten years, to enable such amendments to be made as experience and new conditions might appear to require. It must not be overlooked that if political agencies were to prevent the statutory extension of bank charters, the country might be thrown into a state of financial chaos. There is no good reason why this risk should not be removed.

From March to the end of June, 1934, the Banking and Commerce Committee of the House of Commons conducted further investigations of many phases of banking in Canada. The general managers of the banks attended week after week and gave evidence when required, covering 350 pages of the 1,000 pages of the record of proceedings of that committee. They leave it to the fair-minded people of Canada whether or not they answered satisfactorily the many and searching questions asked.

CORNER-STONES OF POLICY
The banks of Canada have laid four corner-stones of policy upon which the whole edifice of commercial banking rests.

First—the holders of their notes must be adequately protected. Bank notes are therefore a first charge on all banking assets. Note holders may also rely upon the circulation redemption fund lodged with the Minister of Finance, which must be maintained, under any and all circumstances, at 5 per cent of the note circulation of the commercial banks.

Second—The banks must safeguard the $2,554 millions belonging to their depositors. Although the banks' legal relationship to depositors is not that of trustee, but of debtor, the bank's yield place to none in their deep sense of responsibility in this respect.

Public confidence in the Canadian banks withstood a severe test when all banks in the United States were closed during the "banking holiday" of March, 1933. Current and savings deposits in Canada remained undisturbed. This bears testimony not only to the stability of the banks but to the steadfastness of the people of the country.

Third—The mobilized savings of the country are the banks to support and encourage, production of all kinds, industry, manufacture and trade, by making sound advances to agriculturists and other producers, manufacturers, and business men of Canada; in addition loans are made to federal, provincial and municipal governments pending collection of taxes or the sale of bonds and debentures.

The maintenance of 3,332 branches, and sub-agencies in Canada affords cogent evidence of the desire and ability of the banks to provide complete banking facilities in all parts of the country. Branches have been established in pioneer communities to help in the development of the country; where anticipated growth does not take place, operating losses necessitate discontinuance after a fair trial as a matter of ordinary business procedure.

The total amount of all debit entries passed to individual accounts of all branches in Canada in the month of January last was $3,014 millions, about 50 per cent greater than all bank deposits in Canada, which gives some conception of the turnover and volume of transactions passing through the banks in Canada.

Fourth—The banks assist in the development of the external trade of Canada. Close reciprocal arrangements with correspondent banks throughout the world, and in addition the maintenance of 149 branches and agencies in Great Britain and elsewhere in Europe, the West Indies, the United States of America, and in Central and South America, demonstrate that this corner-stone of policy is an integral part of the banking system.

The foundation on which the substantial structure rests is the shareholders, who furnished the capital which enabled the banks to be established. The shareholders' investment of $284.9 millions (at the time of the last annual statements) consisted of paid-up capital, reserve funds and undivided profits. In 1933, according to the report of the Royal Commission on Banking and Currency in Canada, 42 per cent of these reserves was derived from cash premiums paid by shareholders on capital stock issues, and 34 per cent consisted of profits to which the shareholders were entitled over the course of a century and more, but which were left in the banks as a source of additional strength. The remaining 24 per cent of these reserves came with the assets of amalgamated banks, representing what their shareholders had contributed or allowed to accumulate.

Bank shareholders receive by way of dividends at current rates but 4.2 per cent on their total investment, an amount which, it will be agreed, is moderate in view of the double liability to which they are subject. Thinking people know what happens when a bank ceases to pay dividends, however small—erstwhile railers at banking profits are at the head of the line of depositors demanding their money.

NATIONALIZATION FATAL
Perhaps the most insidious of the monetary nostrums recently proposed is the suggestion to nationalize the banks. This scheme is largely based upon the specious theory that the money deposited in the banks is public credit, created by the community at large, on which the shillies as well as the thrills should be entitled to draw at will. This is the veriest nonsense. Every sane-minded person realizes that the credit dispensed by the banks is based upon the capital supplied by shareholders, their restricted note issues and their depositors' funds.

Members of a community have no right to bank credit merely because they are members of that community. There can be no inherent right to bank credit, for the banks necessarily responsible to their own creditors, can lend only where they consider repayment is well assured; they must refuse to lend in all other cases. The real purpose behind the demand for nationalization of the banks is to get control of the money placed in the banks of Canada. But the four and a half million depositors will have strong views on that subject.

I need not go fully into the dangers of political management of banking. The dispensation of loans upon the basis of political service rendered, a modus operandi which would be unavailing savors too much of the "pork barrel." Who ever heard of anything being put back into the barrel? Under such control depositors could have no assurance that their savings would be safeguarded. Indeed, it is a question if there would be any depositors.

Is it any wonder that Lord Snowden (Socialist ex-chancellor of the exchequer) said, in regard to a similar proposal made in England: "If the banks were nationalized they would have to be managed as they are now if their solvency is to be maintained." This would be impossible under political domination.

The recent declaration against bank nationalization by the American Federation of Labor is also significant.

BANKS DO NOT CREATE CREDIT
The notorious theory of nationalization of banking is linked with the equally harmful one that banks create credit by the mere stroke of a pen. The irrefutable answer to all this is that the banks pay to savings depositors annually millions of dollars in interest in order to attract the wherewithal to make loans. If they could create credit out of nothing, what enormous dividends they could pay in comparison with their present modest dividend. What endless work they could save by telling their depositors to take their savings elsewhere! Then there would be nothing to do but lend, to all and sundry, credits represented by strokes of the pen, and to divide fat profits among their shareholders—a Utopian absurdity! Despite the misapprehension of quotations from various authorities, including the Macmillan Report (British), so frequently quoted by credit creationists, I remain opposed to the idea that a commercial bank can create out of thin air. I am not alone in these views. The Economist of London, the leading financial weekly in the English-speaking world, in an article in the Banking Supplement of May 18, 1935, which was quoted to some extent in Canadian publications, carefully examined and discarded this theory. After explaining how a borrower contracts a debt to a bank in exchange for that bank's debt to him or the proceeds of the loan, The Economist proceeds to say: "What has happened is that the bank has mobilized wealth. It has acquired, or takes a lien on, a form of wealth which was not liquid and immediately spendable (the borrower's security) and given in exchange its own obligation in the form of a deposit, which is spendable. The bank has not 'created' deposits; at the most it has converted illiquid wealth into liquid deposits. The banks can therefore be acquitted of the charge of creating their deposits out of thin air."

The Social Standard, the official organ of the Socialist party of Great Britain, in its April, 1935, issue, quoted with approval, in a leading article, a statement by H. J. Welch, author of "Money, Foreign Trade and Exchange," that "... both loans and investments by banks can only be provided and made out of monies deposited by the public and therefore out of assets representing such deposits." In a recent article of the same author, "In other words, he puts forward the same view as has been consistently maintained in these pages." Further on it is stated: "If the credit creationists are right, it is, from the scientific point of view, immaterial whether their theories are politically dangerous to certain existing interests. We maintain that they are wrong, and that therefore the workers ought not to waste their time with schemes for nationalizing the banks."

Later on the article mentions The Times report of a speech of mine in London in June, 1934 (for referring to which I trust the unusual circumstances will excuse me)—and states that I declared that the description of the relationship between deposits and loans indicates his own opposition to the credit creationist illusion.

CREDIT NOT RESTRICTED
The criticism repeated most often is that the banks have restricted credit during the depression to the extent of some $500 millions and that in investing their depositors' funds in Government securities they have impeded the flow of money from business and industry. Let us first rid ourselves of any idea that 1929 is a fair basis of comparison. Apart from call loans (which fluctuate with stock markets), current loans in Canada averaged $1,062 millions during 1929-30, a period of five fairly normal years. The average loans for the five years 1930-34 were $1,186 millions, over $100 millions higher than during 1929-30. That is not credit restriction. From a low of $940 millions in January, 1928, three current loans steadily rose to $1,386 millions in October, 1934, a period of about forty-five months. The decline from that high point has been much more gradual than the rise, for loan did not recede to $940 millions until July of this year, some sixty-nine months later! Although bank loans are necessarily made for short terms only, it is clear that the banks permitted borrowers to repay these excess loans slowly during a period of 5 1/2 years, over 30 per cent longer than the time of their expansion. As we shall see later, the banks' purchases of securities, instead of representing money improperly withheld from business and industry, largely counteracted this drop in loan volume.

The fact of the matter is that business men, faced with falling prices, reduced their inventories to the minimum, and applied the proceeds to repayment of their bank loans. Moreover, the reduced market prices of wheat, lumber and many other commodities since 1929 have enabled Canadian production to finance itself on much smaller bank loans. The fall of 30 per cent in wholesale prices affords a further clear illustration of this. In England and other countries the lack of growth of bank loans, despite evidence of recovery and increased production, is due to the fact that borrowing in this, as in previous depressions, has lagged far behind recovery. As confidence is restored and opportunities for profitable employment of money are found, prospective borrowers naturally use their own accumulated funds first, hence the time lag in the growth of bank loans.

The banks have been blamed for their large purchases of Government securities, but the critics fail to realize that every bond purchased meant a corresponding credit to the "issuing" Government or to the seller from whom it was acquired. Between the end of 1929 and the close of September, last, the banks increased their investment portfolios from $448 millions to $1,103 millions, placing some $655 millions at the complete disposal of the vendors of those securities. The only alternative for the banks would have been to hold the cash in their vaults. This increase in security holdings was actually greater than the decrease in loans of which complaint has been made.

SOUND BORROWERS SOUGHT

No Canadian bank, whilst paying 2 per cent interest on savings deposits, would turn down or refuse good commercial or other loans bearing up to 7 per cent in order to hold excess cash yielding nothing, or to put the money into Government securities such as treasury bills and other short term obligations yielding from, say 1.30 per cent to 2 per cent, or long term bonds yielding about 3 per cent. The banks, in addition to savings interest, must pay operating costs, taxes, etc., at several thousand branches and cannot afford to become investment trusts. They can only derive profits from commercial and other business, and their abnormal investments in securities at the present low yields afford clear evidence that good loans are not offering in substantial volume.

Another factor is that at present many customers, who would normally be borrowing from the banks, have on hand surplus funds which they are unable, under existing conditions, to utilize in their businesses, but which they wish to keep readily available. They therefore deposit them with their banks, in preference to investing in securities at the present low yields. While the banks are competing strenuously for good loans, they cannot scatter advances among all who want money, without regard to merit and prospect of repayment. The mere refusal to be stamped into granting credit to persons who, for various reasons, are not credit-worthy.

There are centuries of recorded banking history, practice and experience to draw upon, and dangers and signals are recognized at once by practical bankers. When borrowing tales are told of loans having been denied there is always another side of the story. Public accusations of credit restriction by the banks are usually made in general terms. When specific cases are mentioned, particulars are generally withheld under pretext or another. When details are revealed investigation is gladly made, both in the bank's own interest and in the interest of its customer. Despite the care taken by the banks in the training and selection of managers, and the supervision of their assistance given to build up their loaning business on which profits depend, an occasional opportunity to make a safe loan might be lost by an inexperienced or lethargic manager. Head offices keep a sharp lookout to avoid any such loss of business, knowing that credit-worthy borrowers, if they cannot obtain advances at one bank, promptly apply to another.

Complaints that banks withhold credit unreasonably are not confined to any one country. Pursuant to a recommendation of the British Macmillan Commission for the establishment of a bank holiday in England for making loans to industry of a type not usually suitable for commercial banks, a company named "The Credit for Industry Limited" was formed about two years ago. The total loans of this company at June 30, 1935, amounted to only $210,000. The chairman, in a recent statement to The London Morning Post, said: "At the moment I am convinced that there is not a single deserving business in the country which is denied legitimate and justifiable financial assistance. Many thousands of individual cases have been reviewed by me personally, and from what I have seen and from what I know, I believe that statement correctly represents the situation. ... I know from experience how small a percentage of the applications merits serious consideration. ... My own personal view, and here I am expressing merely my own opinion, is that there are far too many cases of deserving business, like, who want to be spoon-fed. A little more self-reliance would do us no end of good."

The whole question concerning the decrease in bank loans is answered by this: No one wants to borrow money from us merely because we want to lend; credit-worthy customers are only when the funds can be used to a profit. Confidence in opportunity to make profitable use of borrowed money is a prerequisite to an increase in bank loans.

NOTE CIRCULATION
It has been asserted that the banks are responsible for a decrease of $100,000,000 in the note circulation since 1929. A glance at the facts will reveal the error of this statement. The mere comparison of the total issues of Dominion notes and Bank of Canada notes will tell the story, for the bulk of these has been held by the banks and only a small amount by the public. The total in the hands of the public of commercial bank notes, Dominion notes, and Bank of Canada notes, including notes held by the banks, is the only basis for exact comparison of note circulation.

In January, 1929, the total notes of all kinds circulating among the public amounted to $173,000,000; in September last the figure was $174,000,000. The largest circulation in 1929 was $205,000,000. The maximum fluctuation in that year was $32,000,000, in other years it has been more or less for the elasticity of Canadian note circulation is such that it expands and contracts readily and precisely in accordance with the requirements of trade and economic activity.

It is clear that there has been no substantial drop in note circulation. Even if there were, the banks would not be responsible for it, for it is to their interest to maintain their note circulation at the maximum. As stated in the Macmillan Report (Canadian) it was then estimated that banks made a net profit of 1.80 per cent on average circulation; the rate would be lower to-day, but it still affords a sufficient incentive to maintain the largest possible note distribution within the present statutory limit, namely, the amount of a bank's paid-up capital.

INFLATION IS DANGEROUS

The claim of reduced note circulation was evidently introduced as the basis for a proposal to inflate the paper note issues of Canada. The banks resolutely oppose, although it might well be argued that they would gain by it. They could repay deposits in depreciated currency, increased prices of securities and goods pledged against loans now insufficiently margined would enable such borrowers to repay their loans. But in the end—and there is always an end to inflation—there would be a day of reckoning when the banks and everyone else would be involved in loss.

Inflation increases living costs, and higher prices always precede increased wages and salaries. All those whose incomes are relatively low suffer first and longest. Their savings are soon spent. Buying power derived from the income received from securities, mortgages, etc., diminishes, with consequent suffering to all persons dependent upon fixed incomes. Privation becomes universal. It is significant that those countries which experienced the worst suffering from post-war currency inflation are now making a valiant fight to maintain a gold standard.

BANKING PROFITS

It is frequently alleged that the banks make a clear profit of the difference between their lending rates and the rate of interest paid to depositors. Two per cent from 7 per cent, it is said, leaves a neat profit of 5 per cent. But it is not as simple as all that, as perusal of the monthly statements of the banks to the Government will show. At present (September 30, 1935), some 8 per cent of public liabilities is maintained as cash reserves or deposits with the Bank of Canada. None of this earns any interest. Other items of a cash nature amounting to a little over 10 per cent of such liabilities also earn no interest.

Close to 21 per cent of public liabilities is represented by other quick assets or liquid reserves, about three-quarters of which is comprised of Government treasury bills and bonds maturing in less than two years, the average yield, at present market price, being below 2 per cent. The remaining one-quarter represented by call loans in Canada and reserves necessarily kept abroad, yields at present an average of about 3 per cent. A further 24 per cent is invested in Government, municipal and other sound securities yielding, at present market prices, in the neighborhood of 3 per cent. About 40 per cent of public liabilities is represented by loans to governments, municipalities, commerce, industry, production and agriculture, at rates which naturally vary according to the quality of the advance.

From the foregoing, it will be clear that after paying the savings depositors 2 per cent interest, and meeting the entire expenses of operation, including the costs of many gratuitous services, and the ever-increasing burden of federal, provincial and municipal taxation, and after making provision for bad debts, the banks are left with a net earnings but of scant surplus from which dividends to shareholders can be paid. It will be realized from these figures that the banks, like business generally, are feeling the pinch of reduced earnings, and it will undoubtedly be necessary in future to make charges for many services which in the past have been given free or for less than cost.

The present campaign by governments, municipalities, and, indeed, by almost all borrowers for lower and lower interest rates has had drastic effects upon the income of all who derive their revenues from loans and securities. Clearly there is a point below which such interest rates should not be allowed to go. A cut of 1 per cent in the rate of interest on the $1,040 millions of current bank loans in Canada would reduce bank gross earnings by over $10 millions, and would entail a corresponding reduction in interest paid to over 41 million depositors, if present modest dividends are to be maintained. If dividends disappear the banks would speedily lose the public confidence so essential to their existence and the financial strength of Canada would be seriously impaired.

BANKS HAVE DONE PART
Perhaps, I have spoken over-long, but I desired to touch upon some of the more important misapprehensions concerning banking. I have not attempted to cover the whole subject by any means, but have endeavored at least to indicate that there is another side to the story which the public would like to hear.

I do not wish, however, to leave the impression that banks are always in the right and are run by supermen who never make a mistake. Bank employees are human, and with 25,000 of them engaged in carrying on the operations of the banks in Canada, errors are inevitable, notwithstanding intensive training and every safeguard thus far conceived. It is axiomatic that banks prosper only when their customers prosper, so that our wishes for the return of better times to business are not entirely unselfish. Prosperity cannot be brought back merely by wishing, and the banks, well knowing this, have done their part, in the face of criticism of their sound policies, to ensure Canada emerging from the depression with her financial institutions still sound and fully competent to assist production, industry and commerce to take advantage of the good times when they come as they will. The banks are not alone in having kept their house in order; the wheels of industry and production are beginning to move less slowly; but there is still a degree of inertia to be overcome. There are many people who feel that governments should legislate prosperity into being; others advance equally fantastic proposals of their own invention, whilst still others applaud destructive criticism of anything savouring of success and decry constructive attempts to revive confidence which has been sadly battered by these onslaughts.

May I conclude by saying that this

To the Editor:—If Alderman Feden is correctly quoted in Tuesday's Coling's report of Council meeting Monday it would seem he has a very poor opinion of the intelligence of the average voter in Victoria.

He is quoted as saying he has to vote the way he does at the council meetings to save the voters of Victoria from themselves.

Such egotistical statements only show Alderman Feden must be living in a clouded atmosphere and out of touch with the improved intelligence of the voters of Victoria in recent times.

I would suggest the alderman get his ear nearer the ground and listen to any good advice the average voter of the city of Victoria is able to give and suggest.

STRONG DRINK

To the Editor:—There is a highly influential group in London who are voicing the unmistakable growing temperance sentiment in the Old Land. Lady Astor has expressed an age-old truth in the striking sentence, "Drink has demonstrated itself to be the world's enemy No. 1." Lloyd George provides this testimony: "If we are going to found the prosperity of the country—its commercial prosperity, its industrial prosperity, we must cleanse the foundations of the rot of alcohol." Winston Churchill, ex-Chancellor of the Exchequer, adds: "If you can succeed in reducing the enormous expenditure of our population on strong drink every year, and business in the country will benefit." Mr. Herbert Pickering, ex-governor of Bedford and Newcastle Jails, said: "I have stood with twenty-three men on the scaffold and in every instance they said, 'that but for the influence of alcohol they would never have been here.'"

The Efficiency Magazine of Great Britain: "This magazine has always refused whisky advertisements. There are enough drunken fools in the British Isles without trying to make more. In these hard days we need all the brains we have, and there are not ten men in Britain who are so clever that they can afford to add to their brains with whisky."

Since the United States has adopted the legal sale of liquor, making beer (which has been called the most insidious of all strong drinks) especially available on every hand, she has witnessed the greatest death toll on her highways that she has ever known. During the last year alone practically as many people were killed in that way as were killed in the American army in the Great War. The Travelers Insurance Company of Hartford estimates that 86,000 persons were killed and about 1,000,000 persons maimed in the 9,000,000 accidents in the year 1934. Modern guns, during the World War, cracked and weakened one of the most marvelous relics of ancient architecture, and now modern ingenuity is trying to rescue it from further destruction. It is the huge arch and wall at Ctesiphon, in Iraq, not far from Bagdad.

This is the largest unsupported brick arch in the world. It measures eighty-four feet in width. It covered the banquet hall of King Croesus II, its builder. Here the great kings of New Persia held their magnificent court.

During the war, the Turks hid their heavy guns underneath this structure and the resultant bombardment caused cracks in the wall. Now cement is being used to help preserve it. The stamp below, showing this huge arch and wall, was one of the first issued by Iraq in 1923.

A PLUM PUDDING WITH NO REGRETS

A Recipe for a Deliciously Digestible Christmas Pudding

WHAT would the Jokesmiths have done during the past two or three hundred years without the plum pudding? They have made fun of it in hundreds of ways—but all their jokes have been founded on the indigestibility of it—and that is no joke—no joke to fill your stomach with a mess of soggy pudding which clogs and disarranges the digestive system. It's more of a tragedy than a joke. But a plum pudding need not be indigestible. There's a way to make a plum pudding even more delicious than when made in the pasty, soggy, conventional way—make it with Roman Meal entirely, using no pasty flour or bread crumbs at all.

A pudding so made will not have a suggestion of sogginess. It will be granular—open and porous to the digestive fluids which will pour through the food mass as freely as water pours through gravel, and digestion will be prompt and perfect at one time, thus avoiding fermentation from non-digestion of the starch, which cannot be avoided when the pudding is soggy and gummy, as must be the case when made of pasty flour.

Here is a recipe for a Christmas or Plum Pudding, which, if you will use it, will ensure that hereafter you will never use any other:

CHRISTMAS PUDDING

1 lb. raisins
1 lb. currants
1 lb. dates
1 lb. almonds
1 lb. pecan
1 lb. cherries
1 lb. brown sugar
4 eggs
1 cup grated raw potato
1 lb. chopped walnuts
1 cup grated raw carrot
4 cups Roman Meal
1 teaspoon allspice
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1/2 cup nutmeg

Pot fruit, nuts, carrot and potato in basin, dredge well with one cup Roman Meal. Mix chopped suet with three cups Roman Meal, and add to fruit, etc. Cream sugar and eggs together and add this to mixture. Butter pudding bowl and pack to within one inch of top. Cover with waxed paper and tie cloth over bowl. Put in hot steamer and steam for about four hours. This recipe does not require baking powder or baking soda, although a little of either may be added if desired.

Keep in mind when considering the above recipe that the conventional plum pudding is very constipating as well as indigestible. By making your pudding of Roman Meal, it will not only be delicious and digestible, but a natural laxative which will aid you in eliminating from the food or life canal the results of the other food excesses usually indulged in at Christmas time.

If you have been a Roman Meal user you already know its health-building properties and will be ready at once to try this new way of using it. If you have not used Roman Meal here is a delightful way to begin to use it, and one that will make you an enthusiast—so pleased will you be with its deliciousness and its nutritive and health-building results. You will realize you have never tasted the best in Plum Pudding before, and at the same time you will be building health instead of disease. Most foods used at Christmas Feasting add to the acid residues in the blood, which are the real cause of disease.

I am now on a lecture tour covering fourteen thousand miles, talking to audiences often three or four times a day—answering questions far into the night—"dog's life"—and I shall carry on for months doing work that few men in the thirties could stand up under. Each night from the lecture platform I defy disease to attack me, and I shall do so each night for ten months. I shall be in hot southern U.S. climates, then travel north into cold New England, Quebec and Ontario, wearing no overcoat, vest nor underwear. I shall never have a cold, an ache or pain, and I shall never miss a single lecture, no, not one. Yet in spite of all this tremendous strain I shall this tremendous strain I shall through unthought, and before it is over I shall be 78 years young. Roman Meal has been my greatest aid in building my marvelous 77 years young body and its resistance. It can do as much for you, and Plum Pudding is one of the most delightful ways in which to use it.

And the Christmas Pudding Season brings us close to the New Year. Start it off by a more sensible, more healthful diet. If you will write me I will gladly send you my booklet, "How to Keep Well," and other health literature. Address Robt. G. Jackson, M.D., 577 Vine Avenue, Toronto.

Child Needs Nutrition, Vitality For Winter

Sunshine and Fresh Air, Abundant in Summer, Must Be Replaced by Artificial Means to Maintain Health These Months

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEN

In the summertime your children, even the smallest ones, are able to get about pretty well outdoors. They have the advantage of sunshine and fresh air.

As a result they approach the winter season with a good deal of vitality. Vitality sometimes is translated by scientists into the word resistance. When we have resistance, we are able to overcome many of the minor infections which attack us.

With increased resistance we can overcome even serious infections. Or, as a child can have all the advantages of summer and yet, with improper nutrition, can come to the winter season without resistance. There seems to be a close relationship between nutrition and ability to resist disease.

If the child's weight is adequate for his height and age, if he has had plenty of vitamins, proteins, carbohydrates, fats and mineral salts to keep his body tissues in repair and in good functioning order, it will end the summer with added resistance.

In the wintertime, the child will lack the sunshine and fresh air in many instances, and will have to replace them with some of the artificial factors which modern science has made available. Thus artificial sunshine, cod liver oil and vitamin D milk can do much to replace the effects of sunshine that the child gets in summer.

With the coming of winter the child is likely to be kept indoors. Nevertheless, everything possible ought to be done to keep up the good hygienic habits that have been developed during the warmer season.

Whenever the weather permits, the windows should be kept open even though more clothing may be necessary.

The exercise of the summer season may be met in part by indoor exercise, but it is well to provide sufficient light, loose yet warm clothing, good shoes or rubbers, and to permit the child to have some exercise outdoors.

If, in addition to these habits, the child's nutrition is very closely watched during the winter season, there seems to be no reason why the youngster should not approach spring with its vitality only slightly diminished from that with which it reached winter.

Industrial Pace Growing Faster

New York, Nov. 22.—The general level of industrial operations was higher for the week, with some divisions advancing schedules, instead of curtailing output, which is usual at this season, Dug and Bradstreet report. The rising demand for finished steel lifted the rate in most districts, while tin plate mills were busier, as beer-can production increased. The automobile and allied lines were among the leaders in the headway being recorded currently, production of parts and accessories holding to capacity, while die and machine shops and foundries increased working forces.

Plate glass production continued to exceed the comparable 1934 period by about 75 per cent, with orders for safety glass up sharply. Output of building materials used in repairs and replacements, shingles, window glass, and hardware, continued to rise. Production of electrical equipment was maintained at about 10 per cent above the 1934 level, while sanitary and heating equipment was larger by 10 to 25 per cent. Manufacturers connected directly or indirectly with the heating and ventilating industry have had the busiest fall season in the last four years, with replacement demand responsible for the greater share of the improvement, as new construction has been only a mild stimulant.

Woolen goods mills continued to consume raw wool at a high rate and the need for replenishing their stock kept up their turnover. Woolen piece goods were active, and the call for spring goods increased. The purchases for the United States army were a considerable factor in the enlarged volume. Manufacturers of clothing were well occupied, with output ahead of a year ago. Shoe manufacturers, in most cases, have passed the peak of their volume production and new orders were rather slow during the week. As a result, new purchases of leather showed a tendency to fall off, but the market generally continued firm.

Huskies Oppose Oregon Gridders

Seattle, Nov. 22.—The stage was set today for the University of Washington football team's last home appearance of the season. Coach Frank Cullison of the University of Oregon, moving his team to Tacoma, believed his webfoots have a good chance to upset the Washington Huskies to-morrow.

James Phelan, Husky mentor, merely looked doubtful and commented he was not sure whether Jimmy Cain, because of a fractured rib, would fill the left halfback position.

STRIKE SITUATION

Vancouver, Nov. 22.—Police reports state an odd situation has arisen in Vancouver waterfront strike circles, strikers and strike pickets being attacked and assaulted. During the last week a number of strikers have been victims of street attacks and in some instances persons not employed on the waterfront have been stopped on the street and accused of being strikers and then attacked.

Tarzan The Untamed

Throughout the night, Tarzan led the way back to the hut in the ape's country. Soon after reaching the cabin, he, Zerk and the other apes swung into the trees and vanished. Tarzan was disturbed. How he was to get rid of the man and the girl, he could not imagine.

A freak of fate had thrown these three radically different types together. One was a savage, almost naked beast-man, one an English army officer, and the woman was she whom the ape-man knew and hated as a Red spy. Through the jungle Tarzan made his way slowly.

More and more difficult it became for Lieutenant Cecil and Olga to keep up with him. At last, impatiently, without speaking, Tarzan picked up the girl and Cecil, astonished, saw him climb high, swing lightly through the branches, and disappear, leaving the white man puzzled.

The night's strange happenings left Roger Cecil thoroughly mystified. In the excitement of this rescue from the cannibals, he had not seen the woman closely. Doubtless she belongs to this wild-man, he thought, and neither of them care now what becomes of me!

You Cannot Be Married and Single at Same Time

Says Old Lives Must Be Forgotten in Marriage

ONE OF the main reasons why there is so much divorce is because modern man and woman try to make marriage an annex to their old lives instead of a substitute for them, and the thing cannot be done. You cannot be both bound and free. You can't have your cake and eat it, too.

Unfortunately, this elemental fact in human experience is seldom taken into consideration by the bride and groom on their wedding day. They do not expect to give up any of the pleasures and diversions to which they are accustomed when they marry. They think they are just going to add to these amusements the delight of having a permanent dinner date with the boy and girl friend, and when they find that marriage means keeping the home fires burning instead of the night clubs' going they begin pricing tickets to Reno.

In other days when a marriage was a binding life contract, instead of a ninety-day option as it is now, people expected to "settle down," as the phrase went, when they got married. They expected to go domestic and spend their evenings at home instead of stepping out to parties.

The man expected to shut his eyes to other women and not to go philandering after every pretty girl who passed by. And he expected to spend his money and his time on his family instead of rollicking around with the boys. And the woman expected to fold away her romantic dreams with her wedding veil and to give up such ambitions for a career as she may have cherished and to devote herself to her home, her husband and her children, and be satisfied with the reputation of being the best cake-maker in her circle. And she, unless she married money, never expected after marriage to have as many pretty clothes as she had before marriage, or to go to as many parties, or to lead as gay and irresponsible a life as a wife as she did as a girl.

Both the husband and the wife recognized that when they got married they passed from one state of existence into another, and because the latter one was of their own choosing and because they felt that it compensated them for what they had given up, they were content, and wedding rings lasted a lifetime instead of being tossed into the ash can.

Of course, there are many young couples who have sense enough to perceive that they can't be both married and single at the same time, and they afford an inspiring picture of domestic happiness. But if a coroner's inquest could be held over every marriage that ends on the rocks it would be found that in most cases the disaster was the result of the husband or wife, or both, trying to live the double life and be a play boy or girl as well as married.

All of us know husbands who break their wives' hearts with their affairs with other women just because they are not willing to give up their flirtations after they are married. They want their wives. They want their homes. But they want also the thrill they get out of philandering, and the two no more mix than oil and water.

We know men who are grouchy and grumpy and who make the first of every month, when the bills come in a day of torment for their wives because they want all of their money to spend on themselves. They begrudge the price of a family. Yet they are proud of their wives and children and homes and would enjoy them if they didn't cost anything.

We all know women who want the prestige of being married women and to have husbands to support them, but who still want to be free to have messy romances with other men and to go off to summer and winter resorts for months at a time.

We know women who want beautiful homes, yet who want to be free to follow careers, or to devote all of their time and energies to running clubs and causes, and who never give a thought to making their homes comfortable for their families.

And we all know mothers who really love their children and want them to grow up into fine men and women, but who are always complaining about how children tie them down and who are too lazy and selfish to do one thing toward shaping their characters.

On everything worth having in the world a price is set. Marriage comes high and it is those who are not willing to pay the cost who lose out in the end.

Uncle Wiggily and the Frozen Fish

By HOWARD R. GARIS

After Uncle Wiggily had taken a bath one day and had made the fuzzy fox slip on the cake of soap, the jolly old rabbit gentleman hopped away to look for an adventure.

"I wonder where will be the best place to find such a thing," he said. "There's a spring in a hole in the ground, but I don't know if it will be cold enough to freeze the spring."

"I shall go to the woods to look for an adventure," he said.

Away he hopped and soon he reached the woods. Most of the leaves had fallen from the trees. There were a few brown ones left on oak trees, for some oaks keep their leaves fall into winter.

"An old, almost water-new," thought Uncle Wiggily as he hopped along. "Next week is Thanksgiving and next month is Christmas. Hurry!"

I don't know why the jolly old rabbit gentleman should have shouted "Hurrah!" when he thought of Thanksgiving and Christmas, but at any rate he did, and perhaps you may do the same.

FRUITS A SPRING

So hopping along in the woods, all of sudden Uncle Wiggily reached a spring. There are several kinds of springs. There is a spring in a hole and a spring in a door, but this was a water spring. Beneath some oak trees, the brown leaves of which rustled in the cold wind, was a little pool of water.

"My goodness!" exclaimed Uncle Wiggily as he looked at it. "The spring is frozen. I didn't know it had been cold enough to freeze the spring."

But it had and over the water of the spring, at which the bunny often used to drink, was a sheet of ice.

"I was going to get a drink," thought Mr. Longears, "but as long as this spring is frozen I'll hop on to the next one. That may be open."

He was just about to hop away when he heard a voice calling.

"Help! Help! Help me out!"

"Who are you and what do you want to be helped out of?" asked the rabbit gentleman.

"I'm a frozen fish and I'm under the ice of the spring," was the answer.

"Please break the ice and take me out. I don't want to stay down in the frozen mud on the bottom of the spring all winter. Please take me out."

"All right," said the rabbit. "Wait a minute."

BREAKS THE ICE

With a stick he broke the ice that covered the spring and near the top of the water he saw a black fish feebly swimming about.

"Quick!" begged the fish. "Take me out of this cold water. I'm almost frozen stiff. I will be in a little while if you don't help me."

"I'll be glad to help you, but if I take you out of the water how can you live?" asked the rabbit. "Fish can't live out of water."

"That is true," was the answer. "But can't you find an old can, fill it with water and put me in it? Then take me to your warm farmhouse, where they have all winter than in this cold spring though some fish friends of mine may like that sort of life. Please take me home with you in a can of water."

"All right. I'll do that," said Uncle Wiggily. Luckily he found an old tomato can, and filling it with water through the hole in the ice he placed the frozen fish in it and started home. On the way he had a queer adventure. I'll tell you about it in the next story, which will be Uncle Wiggily and the money man. And I think it would be jolly if you would turn the door knob around. It must be done.

More vitamin D is contained in the waste oil from the salmon canning industry, than can be found in cod-liver oil, it is said.

BRITISH PLANE PLANS INCREASED

Associated Press

London, Nov. 22. — A project for additional aircraft construction to bring the strength of the Royal Air Force to a total of about 2,200 airplanes by May, 1937, has been disclosed by authoritative sources.

A spokesman for informed quarters said orders for about 250 more planes than previously announced were already placed in factories working overtime to turn out military craft.

When the present programme has been completed, authorities said, the home defence plan will total 1,200, and the fleet, aviation and overseas units about 700.

The previous total had been set for about 1,950.

"The stars incline, but do not compel"

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 22, 1935

Benefic aspects dominate to-day, according to astrology. It is an auspicious day for short journeys and for visits with friends.

There is a promising sign for making decisions regarding future policies. Unless logic is used the judgment may be easily swayed from right to wrong.

Gossip and scandal will be more prevalent than usual and will affect persons in important positions, although the effects will be transitory. The blind who will not see what is best in leadership will not enjoy popularity.

Good news regarding employment is forecast. Workers are to be fortunate in finding jobs, but there may be disappointments for labor leaders who have lost power.

There is a sign read as promising along alliances of the United States with nations that represent advancing civilization. Women to-day will benefit from associating with optimistic friends. It is a time to forget serious subjects in the discussion of domestic affairs.

Some "revelations" which will distinguish this season's social affairs now will be introduced in many cities, including those of the Atlantic and the Pacific coasts.

Washington is to be recognized as one of the world's most brilliant capitals, as the nation's progress and will attract world attention as never before.

Persons whose birthdate is 11 have the security of a year of prosperity, meeting with friends and pleasant journeys. Exciting days are forecast.

Children born on this day probably will be keen of mind and sensitive of nature. Rulers of this sign usually have many friends.

Those who have celebrated it as a birthday include Franklin Pierce, fourteenth President of the United States, 1804.
